NDP's Barrett Suing Bennett

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Premier W. A. C. Bennett was named today in a libel and slander suit filed by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett in the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

The suit alleges that on June 14 Bennett "falsely and maliciously, by the words used, and by further innuendo," stated that the NDP leader "was responsible" for the assaults on cabinet ministers on June 7 in New Westminster.

Premier Bennett, commenting at a press conference this morning on the possibility that the Barrett action might muzzle him during any election campaign, said: "The premier of British Columbia won't be muzzled by a cry-baby politician like Dave Barrett.

"He is just a cry-baby trying to muzzle the premier during what he thinks will be an election. Such action is unheard of in the parliamentary system."

Asked if he was aware that Barrett had filed a writ bringing a libel and slander action against him, Bennett snapped: "I don't pay any attention to Barrett. He's just a cry-baby.

"This is another reason why he is unfit to be premier of this province. The NDP should get rid of him," Bennett said.

Filing of the writ by Barrett and lawyer Alex Macdonald in the court registry nearly caused an incident. A brief argument between Macdonald and court registrar Tom Halbert dissipated, however.

Macdonald, NDP MLA for Vancouver East, said after the writ was filed that Bennett's statement blaming Barrett for the New Westminster disturbance was more than a blanket charge against union persons or the labor movement.

"Now somebody has been singled out with a very grave charge . . . and we intend to have our day in court."

The writ says that Vancouver lawyer Andrew J. Carmichael will be representing Barrett in the case.

Macdonald said he was acting as counsel for Barrett at the moment and any further involvement by him would depend on his availability and Barrett's wishes.

Here is the text of the writ:

"The plaintiff's (Barrett's) claim is for damages for libel and slander contained in words used, published and broadcast by the defendant on or about the 14th day of June, 1972, at or about the Legislative Buildings, Victoria, British Columbia, in which the defendant falsely and maliciously by the words used, and further by innuendo, stated and implied that the plaintiff was responsible for and a party to the implicated in unlawful assaults and abuse of ministers of the Crown occurring at the city of New Westminster, province of British Columbia, as a result of which the plaintiff has suffered damage both personally and in his office and calling; and for costs."

Barrett first hinted he would sue Bennett Thursday, and later informed news media he was going ahead with the action.

At least one cabinet minister was injured in the New Westminster incident from which the libel action arises. Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford suffered bruises and a cracked collarbone.

New Westminster police said Thursday they were launching charges against an individual who had attacked Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and were considering two more charges of damage to property against other persons.

Barrett later made statements in which he said the incident was a spontaneous act of human nature, but that a climate of frustration and fear created by Premier Bennett had helped precipitate the incident.

Woods, Mill IWA Strike Spreading

Unauthorized but legal strike action by members of the International Woodworkers of America brought most coast forest operations to a halt today as forest workers stayed off the job for the second day.

And union leaders in the deadlocked construction industry dispute are maintaining their staunch opposition to a cabinet order to appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission.

More than 12,500 men — more than a third of the forest industry — were reported off the job at logging and sawmill operations on Vancouver Island, the lower mainland and northern coast forest areas.

Hardest-hit by the walkouts is MacMillan Bloedel, with 5,600 men affected by either strike action or by layoffs due to prolonged wildcat strike activity by fallers.

More than 2,300 men at MB's Port Alberni operations were off the job for the second day along with 1,080 men in logging camps on Vancouver Island. They were joined today by 180 men at a Queen Charlotte logging operation and an undetermined number of men at Kitimat.

MILL CLOSED

Crown Zellerbach Ltd. was brought into the picture today, after being unaffected by walkouts Thursday, when the Fraser Mill operation was shut down, idling 1,100 workers. In addition, 175 loggers at Nitinat and 45 at Kitimat walked out.

Canadian Forest Products camp at Inglewood at the north end of the Island was closed down again today, with 500 men off the job. About 365 men at Squamish and New Westminster closed down operations of Weldwood of Canada. Tahsis Co. employees struck, involving 1,125 men. 470 Rayonier men walked out and 300 men struck Twin River Timber at Terrace.

Nine of the 18 unions in the construction industry, still without contracts with Construction Labor Relations Association, say they will not appear Tuesday when the dispute goes to arbitration.

Commission chairman John Parker said he has asked

Flooding Aid Detailed

The B.C. government has established a flood reparations committee and will take immediate action to assist individuals and municipalities whose property has been damaged by flooding, Premier Bennett announced today.

The premier said the B.C. government would pay 50 per cent of the damage costs and the federal government has been asked to pay the remainder.

"The cost of work crews and equipment already used in fighting floods will be considered a part of the provincial contribution," Bennett said. "If that does not make up the 50 per cent, then cash payments will be made.

Bennett also announced that legislation willl be presented at the next session "concerning future flood damage in areas determined to be vulnerable to continued threat.

"It is evident that some individuals and developers have built on lands that are unsuitable because of the danger of flooding. Under the legislation

World Air Strike On for Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian airlines will be grounded Monday when pilots take part in a world-wide one-day strike in protest against air piracy.

The walkout is not directed against any specific government, Capt. Charles Simpson, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association, said today. Nor was it a work stoppage aimed at airlines.

But there is an "immediate and urgent need" for drastic action to ensure strict control of airways, he said.

The 24-hour strike was called by the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations, which represents pilots in 64 countries.

The federation asked United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim Thursday night to seek action by the Security Council against international air hijackings, but a federation spokesman said no action was forthcoming as a result of the meeting.

Simpson said there was "no alternative in the face of international lethargy" but to call a strike.

"Words must now be replaced by action so that once and for all the net closes in on skypirates and those who attack civil aviation."

The strike is scheduled to start around the world at 6 a.m. Greenwich Mean Time (11 p.m. Sunday Pacific Daylight Time).

NEWS BRIEFS

Funds Cut Off

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Subversive Activities Control Board, the source of bitter controversy and political disputes in the United States for more than 20 years, was stripped of all funding by a 42 to 25 Senate vote Thursday.

Medics Strike

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's 100,000 doctors went on a 24-hour strike today, leaving the country's population of 55 million without medical care except for emergencies.

Ports Paralysed

LONDON (AP) — A creeping paralysis hit Britain's ports today with hundreds of ships idle as stevedores walked out in a wildcat dispute over the government's efforts to curb strikes. Nearly 50,000 longshoremen closed down the London, Manchester, Hull, Preston and Liverpool ports by noon today when they walked out in sympathy with three dock leaders facing arrest for defying a court order to halt a dispute over cargo containerization.

Japanese Charged

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Kozo Okamoto, lone survivor of the three-man Japanese suicide squad responsible for the Lod Airport massacre, was indicted today on four charges which carry a theoretical death sentence.

Angered China Rejects Anti-Pollution Draft

STOCKHOLM (CP) — China announced today a sweeping rejection of the United Nations environment principles and launched a biting attack against the United States, accusing her of massacring millions of people in Indochina.

Chang Ke, the chief Chinese delegate at the UN environment conference, also accused Japan of being a nuclear base and accomplice of U.S. imperialism and charged that New Zealand, which had sought a ban on atmospheric nuclear tests, was sympathetic with the aggression of the super-powers.

The Chinese delegation launched this blockbuster political attack as the conference plenary session began debating the draft declaration on the human environment, a set of guiding principles which China refused to support.

Change Ke said the declaration should have contained China's proposal that the super-powers ban nuclear weapons and pledge never to be the first to use these as well as biological and chemical weapons which the Chinese claim would cause pollution.

Arguing that there is no consensus in the conference for adopting the draft declaration, Change Ke maintained that the working committee which drafted the principles should have been content to report only those measures on which there had been total agreement, leaving other points for continuing negotiations later.

Despite the stormy Chinese statement, conference officials were still confident that the draft declaration would be adopted by the plenary session with criticism noted only as reservations and objections.

But it was clear that all the corridor and back-room attempts by a number of delegations to persuade China to join the UN anti-pollution campaign had failed. Chang Ke said China joins with the common people of the world to fight imperialism and improve the environment. The conference, he said, could rely on the people of the world to stand together.

As the debate continued there were questions among some conference officials whether in fact some reference to nuclear weapons can still be made in the principles or whether the issue will have to be shunted aside and referred to the UN General Assembly.

The over-all set of principles is in effect a sermon to the world that "Thou shalt not pollute thy neighbor."

The Chinese view that the principles, known as the declaration on the human environment, doesn't go far enough was emphasized in an all-night closed-door session of a drafting committee which sought a consensus among delegates that never fully materialized.

S. VIET CIVILIAN TOLL NOW 1.25M

WASHINGTON (WP) — The current North Vietnamese offensive has killed or wounded about 80,000 civilians in South Vietnam to date, according to estimates released Thursday by the senate refugee sub-committee.

The calculation included casualties inflicted by both North Vietnamese and allied forces since the stepped up fighting and bombing began March 30 — the day Hanoi launched its offensive.

The sub-committee estimate indicates that the current fighting is the bloodiest for civilians since the United States entered the war in a major way in 1965.

The sub-committee said the comparable figure for the Tet offensive of 1968 is 62,000 casualties.

The estimates are based on hospital admission figures supplied by the Saigon government; on data from hospitals and clinics not covered in the Saigon government's survey, and on reports from voluntary agencies in Vietnam.

Adding these estimates to the previous ones made by the sub-committee raises the total of civilian casualties in South Vietnam since 1965 to 1.25 million people, including 380,000 killed, through May, 1972. Here is the sub-committee's year by year estimates of civilian war casualties in South Vietnam:

GUZZLERS UNIONIZE TO BEAT 'FIZZIES'

SALFORD, England (Reuter) — England's beer drinkers, embittered by changes in their drink and in the pubs where they drink it, are organizing.

An official of Britain's newest union, the campaign for the Revitalization of Ale, said Thursday his group now has 500 members.

The want more of the traditional, cosy pubs instead of "those vast new pubs with their flashy gimmicks" being built by breweries all over England.

And they want to preserve the straight-from-the barrel draught beers that are steadily being replaced by fizzier brews packed under pressure in metal kegs.

CLRA president C. J. Connaghan said he will attend the arbitration hearings, but Ed Fay, secretary of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said the unions will stick by their "no contract, no work" position.

Fay said the unions are prepared to test the cabinet order in court "to see if a man without a contract can be compelled to work."

The union's 42 collective agreements with CLRA expired March 31. Since that time about 30,000 men have been affected by a CLRA lockout which followed limited strike activity by a few of the unions.

840 CONTRACTORS

CLRA represents 840 B.C. contractors.

Last Thursday the cabinet passed its order requiring the construction workers back on the job. The order came into effect Wednesday at 8 a.m. but only some workers in those unions which had reached settlements with CLRA showed up for work.

Compounding MacMillan Bloedel's problems on the forest scene was a walkout at the firm's Harmac operations. About 1,100 members of the Independent Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada walked out, protesting the downward classification of a painter who has been unable to carry out his regular duties for medical reasons.

DISCOURAGE STRIKES

Combined with an estimated 6,000 forest workers laid off because of a log shortage resulting from the fallers' actions, and the non-activity of the 800 fallers themselves, a total of 12,590 men are involved in the labor dispute.

Meanwhile, an IWA spokesman in Vancouver said the union is "discouraging" the men from striking and said some progress is being made in negotiations with Forest Industrial Relations, bargainers for the industry.

"However, we cannot force the men to go back to work," said Clay Perry, Region 1 research director for the IWA.

"If it's a sunny day and the sawmills are hot, and there happens to be a beer parlor on the corner and the men are tired of trying to get an issue settled for years, they're going to say to hell with it, they're going to chuck it," Perry said.

He said the IWA "regrets" the strike action, adding that negotiations would probably go better if the men were still on the job.

SOME PROGRESS

He said there has been some progress in the talks. "If we didn't think so, we would stop meeting (with FIR) and would call a strike," he said.

The walkout action by the IWA members, although not condoned by IWA leaders, is technically legal.

The IWA leaders themselves served strike notice on the forest industry Monday, timing the move in conjunction with expiry of the industry's contracts, which ran out Wednesday at midnight.

The contracts covered a total of 28,000 IWA coast forest workers.

Contract talks began Feb. 23 with the IWA presenting a list of 44 demands, including an across-the-board wage increase of $1 an hour on the base rate of $3.72 in a one-year agreement.

The industry countered by offering 71½ cents over three years and accepted five of the IWA demands outright. The IWA rejected the counter-offer and came back with another of their own, details of which have not been revealed.

TALKS MONDAY

Contracts covering 7,000 IWA members in the Interior expire June 30 and strike votes are now being conducted. Talks with the industry resume in Kelowna Monday.

B.C. Liberal Leader David Anderson said Thursday Premier Bennett is a bad example for union members because he himself has ignored B.C. labor laws in the past.

Because of Bennett's past responses no one knows this time "whether the old man is bluffing or not," said Anderson.

THE BETTER HALF

BARRETT SUES WAC

It was following that charge by Barrett that Bennett made statements to reporters out of which Barrett's libel and slander charge arises.

Informed of Barrett's intention to file the suit, reporters and television cameramen crowded into the court registry office, following Barrett and Macdonald.

As Macdonald stood at the wicket to pay his $20 to register the writ, court registrar Halbert climbed up on the counter where he could see over the cameras and asked:

"What's going on?"

'Merely Filing Writ'

Halbert then said he thought someone should ask before bringing in such a group. Macdonald replied that he was merely filing a writ and was not connected with the other persons.

"This is not a court room," Macdonald said.

When camera lenses and microphones turned towards Halbert he said:

"I wish you'd stop that. All right, we'll see what we can do."

However, he made no further move to interrupt, and after Macdonald made a short statement to reporters, he and Barrett departed.

Two-Wheel Rodeo Set

A group of 25 grade 3 students from John Stubbs School will take part in a bicycle rodeo at the school at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The students were picked because of their high grades.

Sponsored by the Capital Region Safety Council, it is the first of its kind to be carried out here for armed forces' dependent children.

Supervising the event is Ernie Atherton.

New Tremors

ANCONA, Italy (Reuter) — Several minor earth tremors struck this virtually deserted Adriatic port during the night and a vast majority of the 100,000 population prepared to spend another day and night in the safety of the countryside. There now have been nearly 50 tremors since the city was rocked Wednesday by a strong earthquake measuring nine on the 12-point Mercali scale.

Mexican Raps Power Politics

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Luis Echeverria of Mexico began a state visit to Washington Thursday with some strong criticism of those powers that wish to "reduce world politics to agreements between powerful nations."

In a speech to a joint meeting of Congress, the Mexican president mentioned President Nixon's opening of a "dialogue with other powers of different ideologies," and warned that "the end of the cold war cannot be the beginning of an era of peace as long as weak countries are excluded from its benefits."

WHY NOT?

Echeverria said he found it "impossible to understand why the United States does not use the same boldness and imagination that it applies to solving problems with its enemies, to the solution of simple problems with its friends."

The speech was part of a campaign by the Mexican president to emerge as a spokesman for the third world — the poorer nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America — which prefer not to be allied too closely with either the United States or the Soviet Union.

Echeverria's blunt speech to Congress has heard by a relatively small number of senators and representatives in the House of Representatives. He was interrupted by applause three times.

PARTICIPATION

"We understand," Echeverria said, "that the solution of the great contemporary problems — peace security and development — is not to be found in the formation of closed international clubs, but in the participation of all peoples in the decisions that affect them.

"Our people," he added, "are aware that their poverty produces wealth for others. The resentments that have accumulated against political colonialism have now changed to resentment of economic colonialism."

to be introduced, it is very unlikely that those who purchase or build on such land will be considered for public relief in any similar future circumstance."

The Bennett announcement came after a report to the provincal cabinet and the B.C. disaster committee by L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary and deputy to the premier and G. E. Simmons, assistant deputy minister of water resources.

The two officials made a tour of affected areas on the Similkameen, Osoyoos and Kamloops last Wednesday.

Bennett said a flood reparations committee has been established with R. G. Williston, minister of lands, forest and water resources as chairman. Other committee members are Ken Kernan, minister of recreation and conservation, Wesley Black, provincial secretary and highways minister, Wallace and Simmons.

Bennett said that flood damage to properties of individuals and small businesses would be paid on the basis of an assessment by independent appraisers who will visit the disaster areas as flood waters recede.

Meanwhile, at Mission City, the level of the Fraser River rose 23.07 feet today its highest level so far this year.

No flooding was reported, but seepage was a major concern. Government officials predicted the Fraser will peak either today or Saturday. Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan, MLA for Chilliwack, said he thought the situation would be "OK until beyond 24 feet." But the real danger is the possibility of saturated dikes bursting without warning.

In 1948, when the Fraser rose to 24.73 feet, the Fraser Valley suffered about $13 million flood damage.

Meanwhile, at Kamloops, the flood danger lessened as the level of the Thompson began to fall. The Fraser at Prince George was also expected to begin falling soon.

Families uprooted by floods in northwestern Alberta will get government financial assistance, Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner said Thursday.

African Herons Safari to N.W.T.

Early last summer, in an abandoned meadow near Fort Smith in the Northwest Territories, another piece of the world-wide jig-saw puzzle of the Cattle Egret fell into place.

For those of you not on first-name terms with the Cattle Egret, you might know him better as a star of many African wildlife films. He's the small, white heron so often seen accompanying such super stars as the water buffalo, feeding on insects stirred up by the great beasts as they graze.

But Cattle Egrets do not restrict their activities to the dark continent. They're almost as familiar to travellers in India and other parts of southern Asia. They've also been an integral part of the fauna of the vast Marismas of the Guadalquivir River delta in southern Spain for as long as anyone can remember.

CHANGE

But about 100 years ago this long-established pattern of distribution started to change. The egrets began to expand their range into the New World and the process is still going on. The Fort Smith bird was only the latest piece of the puzzle.

And puzzle it is because this major expansion of the bird's range has been carried out with no help from man. What we are seeing in this process is natural selection at work as a species quickly moves to occupy a vacant niche in new territory.

It all began with a 1500-mile, trans-Atlantic hop from the bulge of West Africa to the northeastern tip of South America. How, or when, the hop was made is still a mystery but between 1877-82 Cattle Egrets suddenly showed up in South America along the Courentyne River between Surinam and British Guiana.

Thirty years pass before we hear of them again but in 1911 more were seen in British Guiana. Then there is another 30-year hiatus during which the Cattle Egret was apparently becoming well-established in its new home and had begun to move north.

FIRST SEEN

By the 1940's they had entered North America by way of the West Indies and Florida. The first confirmed report was from Clewiston, Fl., where two were seen in 1941.

By 1953 they were numbered in the thousands and were breeding in the famed Okeechobee country of northern Florida.

In the next seven years they spread out to occupy the coastal plains from Texas to Louisiana and the Atlantic shore as far north as Maine. Five years more saw them move west into southern California, north in Arkansas and Colorado as well as the mid-western states of Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota. By 1970, they could be found along the entire Pacific coast and throughout the plains of central North America.

Canada got into the act in 1952 when a straggler turned up off Newfoundland in the Grand Banks. By the '60s they had moved into Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and the southern parts of Ontario and Quebec and as far west as Manitoba.

NESTING

Later in the decade they added Saskatchewan and Alberta to their range and in 1970 British Columbia entered the fold.

While the first suspected record of a Cattle Egret in British Columbia came from near Otter Point on Vancouver Island, a bird seen and photographed off Iona Island near Vancouver is currently believed to be the first record for the province. That was in December 1970.

Now they've crossed the 60th parallel to mark the most northerly point of their advance yet.

FACTOR

So far no adverse affects on indigenous heron populations have been unearthed but evidence now coming out of the southeastern United States — the present core of the Cattle Egret's North American range — suggests that competition for nesting space may prove to be a critical factor.

No one can foresee where this population explosion of Cattle Egrets will end but one thing seems certain, British Columbians can look forward to this pretty little heron becoming, if not a familiar, at least a regular part of our province's wildlife mosaic.

Firemen There But No Smoke

Where there's smoke there's usually a fire truck, but Victoria residents will soon be seeing them where there is no smoke.

Firemen have launched a "pre-planning and inspection program" which is now part of Victoria fire department's regular duties.

Firefighters will be inspecting all multiple dwellings in the city so in the event of a fire they will be familiar with the building.

While firemen are inspecting a building a man is stationed in a truck outside. Should a fire occur elsewhere in the area, the fire hall radios the man in the truck who, in turn, radios an officer inside. The crew then proceeds from the inspection to the fire.

Fire department officials have divided a map of the city into three areas which are serviced by Victoria's three fire halls. Each area is divided into sections which will be inspected on a rotating basis.

A full crew will inspect a section in their area while firemen from the other two areas will remain at their stations. The next day a crew from one of the other areas will inspect one of their sections.

When all buildings have been inspected crews will start again at the first section and continue in a perpetual cycle. Lieutenant R. Warner, co-ordinator of the program, said they are unable to anticipate at this time how much time is required to complete one cycle.

Warner said the program will relieve regular inspectors of routine duties and enable them to devote more time to major problems. Technical problems spotted by the crews will be dealt with by regular inspection staff.

He said there are some 2,000 multiple dwellings in Victoria and the program will minimize fire losses and provide better fire protection.

Hutchison Heads YM-YWCA

Directors of the Victoria YM-YWCA have cosen lawyer Bob Hutchison to replace Grant Mackenzie as president of the organization.

Mackenzie, a bank manager, has been transferred to London, Ont.

Following his appointment, Hutchison said competition from municipal recreation programs must be met by the YM-YWCA as a step toward solving financial difficulty.

FINANCIAL WOES

"The Y's most pressing and immediate problems are financial — these can be solved in part by increased membership," Hutchison said.

"Our task is to make the Y more relevant and contemporary to our young people. We must also ensure that we create interesting programs attractive to adults.

"Competition from municipal recreation programs must be met by unparalleled quality and service," and this I am confident we can do," Hutchison said.

The new president has a long background of participation and service in the YMCA, of which has been a director for 15 years.

A track and field athlete, Hutchison was an Olympic competitor at Helsinki in 1952 under Y coach Bruce Humber, having been a member of the Y track club since 1947. He still does daily workouts.

A CUTTING MESSAGE

People or planes . . . that's the message this robed group tried to get across Thursday at the Ontario legislative grounds. Led by Edward Falkenberg carrying a scythe, members of the People or Planes Committee marched on Queen's Park in a symbolic funeral for the town of Pickering, site of Toronto's new international Airport. The group deposited three coffins and planted three crosses at the legislature.

Education Transfers

The department of education has transferred two Greater Victoria school administrators.

Cory Holob, district superintendent for the Saanich Peninsula school district and member of Camosun College Council, has been appointed superintendent of the Richmond school district.

GREEK REGIME 'TRANSITIONAL'

The military regime in Greece does not mean to perpetuate itself but wants to restore parliamentary democracy, Byron Theodoropoulos, the Greek ambassador to Canada, said during a two-day official visit to Victoria.

The ambassador and his wife were here for a courtesy call on Premier Bennett and Lieutenant-Governor Nicholson, their last call on a tour of western Canadian provincial capitals.

He described the Greek government as a transitional regime.

The military regime should not be seen as a phenomenon in itself but in the cotext of the last 12 years i aGreece, Theodoropoulos said.

He said Greece had been the scene of political turmoil for 12 years making a "transitional regime" necessary to restore social and political peace.

A sharp increase in Canadian tourists to Greece since the military junta took over is a good gauge of Canadian impressions of the regime, he said.

Theodoropoulos, who spent three terms with the Greek consulate in Turkey, said he hoped Greece and Turkey could resolve their relationship.

The Greek government has done what it could to restore relations with Turkey, he said.

Ambassador Theodoropoulos has spent 27 years in diplomacy. He served on the Greek permanent UN mission and NATO mission, two terms as consul and one as consul-general in Turkey and six years in Greece-Turkey relations over Cypress in the foreign service.

He has been ambassador to Canada for the past 14 months.

A Call for Immediate Action

The world-wide strike of airline pilots, scheduled for next Monday if certain conditions are not met, provides an interesting new use of the strike weapon. In this case the strikers are not demanding changes in wages or working conditions; they are trying to draw global attention to the need for urgent international action to combat hijacking. The pilots, in effect, are now doing what governments and airline companies have been too slow in doing.

The crime of hijacking is too serious to permit dawdling in finding a remedy. With scores of lives at stake when desperate or mentally-ill persons attempt to seize an aircraft in flight, there can be no delay in measures to meet the situation. This is particularly so in the case of the political hijackings in the Middle East which have been marked by a ruthlessness and mad-dog ferocity which demands immediate action. Countries which harbor, and thereby encourage, hijackers should suffer retaliation from all other nations through a complete boycott of air passenger and freight traffic to or from such lands, and wider economic measures if this should fail.

Air traffic is such an essential part of global economic and social transportation today that it cannot be allowed to suffer threats and dangers caused by individuals or groups with criminal purposes in mind. Nor can air services permit the public confidence in them to be shaken. One answer lies in foolproof measures to prevent arms being taken aboard a plane, and strict surveillance of suspect persons. No one really objects to a flight being delayed by fog or other hazard when the preservation of life is placed first. Similarly, inconveniences or delays caused by search of baggage or persons should be accepted willingly as the price of safety in the air.

The pilots, whose own lives are at stake in any hijacking, should receive public support in their efforts to achieve greater safety. The meeting of International Civil Aviation Organization officials to draw up more stringent security regulations may do much to correct the situation. It is difficult to understand why the 124 nations belonging to this organization have not long ago agreed on adequate steps. The pilots, through their threat of strike in the public's interest, have shown they are not prepared to wait any longer. The public should indicate the same feeling on the matter.

When Government Goes Buying

It would be hardly feasible to match federal purchasing precisely with regional population but Mr. James Richardson, the minister of supply and services in Ottawa, will receive approval from Westerners for his announced intention to make federal purchases conform more nearly to population distribution. The federal government purchases more than $1 billion in goods and services annually from Canadian companies.

In the current budget debate he revealed that almost 85 per cent of purchases by Ottawa had been made in Ontario and Quebec, home of 65 per cent of Canadians. The four western provinces, having about 27 per cent of the population, provided less than 10 per cent of supplies and services. Purchasing targets, he indicated, are being established for various regions.

Although democracy may dictate that population figures be an important criterion in supplies to government, it would no doubt be more practical to purchase from areas where there is a sound industrial base and a good transportation system. In such a scale the West might rate higher than 27 per cent. But cost should remain a dominant factor. Federal purchases should normally be on the basis of economy, and not be used as a form of subsidy.

In moving towards a just purchase formula let us, by all means, reduce inequities — but in working out an alternative, let us avoid creating an inefficient, politically-oriented purchase system whose added costs would inevitably fall on the taxpayer.

Higher Than the Floods

From anxiety-ridden Kamloops comes one of those news stories that help to revive faith in humanity. When the flood dangers were at their crest, says a Canadian Press report, thousands of volunteers flocked to help residents protect their holdings. They sought no pay. They were under no formal compulsion. They merely saw the need to help people under flood threat and they responded.

The incidents are uncounted. Men who had worked a full shift on their own jobs turned out to man the dikes and strengthen them. They were assisted by students who sought no personal gain. They received snacks from others as they labored.

"They just came and wanted to know if they could help," said the mayor of Brocklehurst, one of the most severely threatened communities.

The volunteers were nameless in the news item, just people capable of rising to heights greater than the flood levels of the Thompson. The world is brighter for hearing about them.

DAVID HUMPHREYS

Overtime: Use and Misuse

LONDON — Britain's passenger-oriented nationalized railways carry 450,000 commuters into London every morning and home again every evening. Most must rely for a trouble-free journey on some railman working his day off. British Rail, like a lot of industry here, runs on goodwill.

Usually the journey is smooth because British industry and workers are addicted to overtime. The present unpleasantness, with implications for all British industry, shows what happens when goodwill is withdrawn and overtime evaporates. Rail unions, rejecting an arbitration recommendation for a 12½ per cent wage increase, turned not to the strike but to the work-to-rule.

This meant that men refused to work overtime, daily or on Sundays and scheduled rest days. The government applied the emergency machinery of its new Industrial Relations Act. Without even a strike, so important was the loss of overtime that the national industrial relations court ordered a cooling-off period of the work-to-rule.

Compulsory Overtime

The court found itself having to decide whether a worker, with a contract for a 40-hour week, could be compelled to work overtime. In its first judgment the court ruled that a railwayman could not be forced to work Sunday or his other day off but, applying common sense, it held that "disruptive practices" in a work-to-rule could be considered breach of contract.

Resulting uncertainty and confusion have revealed some musty anachronisms. They have grown from custom and usage to plague British industry. Industrial relations are riddled with them. Just one, the use and misuse of overtime, points to the size of the rebuilding problem to make industry modern and efficient.

Unemployment stands at more than 900,000. Unions are pressing to reduce the work week from 40 to 36 hours. Yet about 60 per cent of all workers count on overtime — an average of seven hours a week — to fill out earnings. On the railways 71 per cent on the payroll draw overtime, a special case, some say, because of the shift work required.

While the contract work week has been shrinking, the total time worked through overtime has changed little.

The workman says, of course he doesn't like long hours but finds them necessary to earn a living wage. And for the 2.4 million Britons on a basic rate of $50 a week or less, this is believable. Union official lines put the workers' story more pointedly. The two-million member Transport and General Workers' Union says: "Having to stretch out one's work in order to achieve a living wage through unnecessary overtime is undignified and unsatisfying." A royal commission on unions reported in 1968 that most responsible union leaders deplored habitual use of overtime. But it also said: "If an employer wishes to reduce overtime he will find himself having to confront opposition from work groups who see the removal of overtime as a threat to their earnings."

Economic necessity apart, the unions have used overtime as a useful tool in disputes, achieving the same results as a strike but without loss of basic pay.

As Warwick university's specialist William Brown put it: "What can a manager with a production crisis do when all his men claim that their grannies have fallen ill and, sorry, but they can't do overtime that week? The chances are that his granting a concession will bring about a miraculous granny cure."

A transport union spokesman admitted that for years the battle to whittle down straight time hours has only resulted in more overtime. For various reasons union policy had not been tight enough, he admitted, but it was hardening. "It's an accepted fact that the chaps want it," said a spokesman for the Confederation of British Industry representing management. "It gives them a reasonable wage packet with a little extra to go on holiday, buy a house, or whatever." Overtime for its own sake was deplorable. So much depended on the circumstances.

A spokesman for the Industrial Society, private consultants, said it should not be forced on anyone, or used as a means of giving a living wage. Properly controlled it could be used efficiently, for example in meeting order deadlines. More often than not, he said, the worker could draw more in social security than his basic wage. British Rail? A spokesman said it was all very complicated, the growth of centuries of custom. Overtime worked at enhanced rates had proved beneficial to workers. There had been no firm assault on rail management to devise a better system. In some areas overtime was essential to efficient operation of the railway, he said.

Questions Begged

Questions are being begged all along the line. Management begs the question of whether, in Britain 1972, it should be taken for granted that men should have to work overtime to go on holidays. The unions beg the question of whether they put power over workers' real interests in their equivocal approach to what they regard as an evil. The worker begs the question of whether his "bloody-mindedness" is not damaging the economy whose growth and health must be the springboard of his welfare.

In the rail example, a 12½ per cent wage increase will be granted. Only the timing is in dispute now. Even with it, the lower-paid workers will remain low paid: still below $50 a week. One of the basic causes for national industrial disruption will remain. If it is granted on union terms, either fares must go up in this highly inflated economy or public funds must bail out the railway. The British are already more heavily taxed than Canadians. Yet when a man can do better on welfare than from a basic wage on the railway something is fundamentally wrong. The government has refused to have a prices and incomes policy — in the sense of establishing guidelines — for the last two years, on the grounds that they won't work. Despite large reductions in taxation this year, the most recent economic forecasts are not encouraging. Accordingly the government is again rethinking incomes policy.

JAMES RESTON

It's Goofy and Wonderful

WASHINGTON — The human side of politics is a terrible and tragic thing, and it has never been more apparent than in the pictures in the newspapers over the last few days.

There on the front pages was the Duchess of Windsor, in her black funeral veil, looking across during the burial services for her husband at the Queen of England, whom she might have preceded in that role herself.

There also on the front pages was Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts at Arlington Cemetery, kneeling at the grave of his murdered brother Robert, alongside the widow of his other murdered brother, John, on the fourth anniversary of Robert Kennedy's assassination, with Robert Kennedy's widow, Ethel, on crutches and her flock of children in the background.

Smile of Defeat

Suddenly, we had a glimpse these last few days of the accidents and losers and might-have-beens of political life. Ed Muskie and Hubert Humphrey grinning bravely alongside George McGovern, as if they had won. Muskie, relaxed in defeat, showing the amiable side of his character at the National Press Club, which somehow he lost in the struggle of the primary elections, and making his audience wonder and even regret.

And finally there was George Wallace in the newspaper pictures, with his hairy and muscular arms and a bullet in his spine, promising to go to the Democratic convention at Miami Beach, paralysed or not, to fight on for the Presidency of the United States.

The newspaper reporters and photographers put all this down, but it is really beyond us. We celebrate the winners and leave the losers to the novelists, who are off somewhere else, and, oddly, pay little attention to the human drama of American politics.

What do they think in the night, these losers? What of the Duchess of Windsor from Baltimore, who cost her lover the throne of England, going back from his grave at Windsor to her refuge outside Paris? What of Edward Kennedy, the heir apparent of the family dynasty and the hope of the Democratic party, who lost it all at the dike bridge on Chappaquiddick?

Muskie is a less complicated and tragic figure. He lost his lead for the Democratic Presidential nomination maybe because of his good rather than his bad qualities, and he almost seems relieved by his miss. Humphrey is different. On his record, and on the judgment of most of his colleagues in the Senate, he was more qualified to be President than any other man in his party. And he knew it. And he wanted it so badly, and he blew his chances, not once but twice, and ended up denouncing an old friend for the "radicalism" he had fought for most of his political life.

But they go on, these losers, without grieving too much. Most of them rise by accident beyond their early dreams and adjust to their defeats. Barry Goldwater is a happy man in the Senate now and can even joke about losing by a record vote to Lyndon Johnson, who adopted the Goldwater Vietnam policy he denounced. Bob Taft and Adlai Stevenson lost the Presidency without bitterness, and now their sons are in the Senate dreaming vaguely that maybe in the end they'll make it, but really hoping they won't.

SENATOR MUSKIE

It is the wives of the Presidential candidates who have the hardest time. They have to keep smiling when they want to cry. They know their men better than all the politicians, reporters and voters in the Republic.

Some of them, but not many, truly believe that the old man is really fit for the Presidency. Muriel Humphrey is a case in point. A very few of them think their husbands would be a disaster. Ellen Stevenson thought so about Adlai, yet that was more of a criticism of her than of him. But most of them go along because they love and believe in their guys, and they hate the thought of winning for themselves but struggle through the battle anyway.

Ladybird Johnson didn't want her husband to accept the Vice-Presidency from John Kennedy, and was wrong, and she wanted him to get out of the Presidency in 1968 to save his life, and was undoubtedly right. It would be interesting to know what Lyndon Johnson thinks about all this now. He is very silent. And very proper. But very proud and probably very sure he was right all along and could have saved the country and the Democratic party from their present anxieties.

This is why politics in America or anywhere else retains its fascination. It is so human, and full of conflict and accident and surprise, and the present Presidential campaign underscores the point.

Paradoxes

Who could have guessed that Richard Nixon would run for re-election in 1972 as a Keynesian, with a four-year deficit of over $30 billion, boasting about his wage and price controls and his friendship with Peking and Moscow? Or that George McGovern, the Democratic preacher's son from the conservative Republican state of South Dakota, could have knocked over the Democratic party with the aid of an unbelieving army of young recruits?

It is a surprising and even preposterous proposition, but that's the way it is — as goofy and wonderful and surprising as the human race — and it's too bad we don't have a great novelist to reduce all this diversity to identity and capture the melody of what is going on in this town.

Greed Creed

Under the heading "More Greed Please!" (Victoria Times, June 9, 1972) you report that Mr. Gagliardi told the Canadian Purchasing Management Association that "greed has been given us by God" and that greed, in the form of business activity, has brought B.C. much of its material advantages. "Without greed" you quote him as saying, "there would be no progress, no incentive to build a better Canada."

"The Ballyshannon foundered off the coast of Cariboo,
And down in fathoms many went the captain and the crew;
Down went the owners — greedy men whom hope of gain allured:

—Mrs. Yvonne Green, Box 3, Lake Cowichan.

Hijackers

I think your newspaper should sponsor a petition to be sent to President Houari Boumedienne of Algeria to return the hijacker to face charges for his hideous crime. Any country which grants asylum to air pirates is, to some extent, an accomplice.

Parades, placards, noisy demonstrations are of little or no value. Often they achieve the opposite effect and defeat the purpose they were intended for. But leaders of countries are none the less sensitive to world opinion when it is strong enough to urge them to take action. Lately, hijacking has not been just a matter of "ransom" money, but a crime against innocent victims. Even a pilot has been shot.

Passengers have been stranded in the heat of the Lebanon desert, gunned down at Tel Aviv airport, and terrified by criminals holding a gun or hiding a bomb.

Are we going to remain passive and inert while this terror in the skies goes on? — E. J. Lattes, No. 1110 Lord Simcoe Apts., 450 Simcoe St.

Discards

The item by Arthur Mayse: "Question: What's Junk and What Isn't?" was just the greatest! (Times, June 8, 1972).

Decisions, decisions on what to throw away and what to keep and treasure.

Mr. Mayse keeping a child's crayon drawing — and Mrs. Mayse keeping a mouse-sized cowboy vest. Great!

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 16, 1912:

There was scarcely a dull moment at the Mt. Tolmie grounds on Saturday when the Victoria eleven gave one of their best displays of the season and succeeded in defeating the Bachelors by a margin of 93 runs just five minutes before the stipulated time for drawing stumps.

Excellent batting, followed up by good bowling and really superb fielding, resulted in a well-merited victory for the local team who have found their true form at last after many days.

Canada as Mr. Clean? Let's Fix Own House First

Canada's eco-diplomacy at Stockholm is anything but quiet. A Canadian presides over the United Nations' "Only One Earth" conference now in session there. Canada's delegates scurry on errands of reconciliation in that most recent of class wars — between the poor who want to do the polluting for a change, the rich who can afford to stop.

Despite promises to present a lower profile in world politics, the Canadian government seems content to have its delegates strike sub-committees with the frenzy of a flagellant, propose amendments as if amending were about to be out-lawed. Canada is playing Mr. Clean at Stockholm, a Bon Ami among the nations. Earthkeeping has replaced peacekeeping as the star turn in our repertoire of foreign policies.

Why not? Peacekeeping's gone out of style, but earthkeeping's ecologically chic. Most leaders of developed lands want to look like good environmentalists. John O'Sullivan claimed North America up to the Pole for the United States on behalf of "the free development of our yearly multiplying millions," but that was a century before Zero Population Growth. Today Pierre Trudeau claims the Arctic for Canada on behalf of the Greater Snow Goose, migratory birds, whales, seals, walrus.

But before Maurice Strong and Jack Davis blow any money from anticipated Nobel Prizes on Swedish cold table at the Stallmastaregarden, they'd do well to examine Canada's credentials for earthkeeping. To qualify as planetary Pinkertons protecting the environment from plundering and fouling, three main credentials are required.

(1) Earthkeepers should be growth-wary. To be wary about growth is not to be adamantly opposed to growth. Nor is it to indulge in doomsday predictions of an imminent end to life unless technology is frozen or turned back. To be wary about growth is to be skeptical of claims that production and technology can carry mankind to perpetually increasing levels of material demand. To be wary about growth is to recognize the need to stop trying to control our environment, the need to start trying to adapt to it instead.

(2) Earthkeepers should set good examples. You can't start preaching greening to your neighbor if your own backyard is sear. You can't start preaching greening to the nations if your own landscape is defaced. Earthkeepers should give up polluting for the same reason lung surgeons give up smoking — to persuade others to do likewise.

(3) Earthkeepers should be enemies of ecocides. Most affronts of nature are inadvertent. No nation shipping oil wants it to spill into the sea, no nation testing nuclear weapons wants to trigger off an earthquake. Ecocides are different. They do not perpetrate ecological disaster by accident. They perpetrate it by design. Here is the ultimate crime against the earth. Any nation crass enough, cruel enough, to indulge itself in ecocide deserves the most resolute of condemnations, the most condign of punishments.

Such are the credentials for earthkeeping. In what shape are Canada's?

By JAMES EAYRS

Not in good shape for growth-wariness, which seems in short supply. Here the cult of GNP thrives like voodoo in some god-forsaken tribe. "Our second century of progress will include a province extending from the 49th parallel to the Arctic Ocean. A population of well over 50 million. A labor force of more than 17 million. Three million people in Metropolitan Vancouver" — so speaks the Premier of British Columbia, who, even as he inspects damage from the latest oil-spill, falls to his knees before the shrines of growth.

The Bennett syndrome — a delusion that growth is great, more is good, bigger is better — is endemic in this country, nowhere more so than at its centre. Ottawa has posited a "trade-off" (Trudeau-talk for net balance-of-advantage) between Harmonious Natural Environment and Economic Growth, and which wins hands down every time? Economic Growth — and you'd better believe it, buster.

Nowhere is it plainly stated but it is nowhere more plainly stated than in its report reviewing foreign policy. "The government is of the view that the foreign policy pattern for the seventies should be based on a ranking of the six policy themes which gives highest priorities to Economic Growth." "The government's choices underscore the priority which attaches to the network of policies, at home and abroad, designed to ensure that the growth of the national economy is balanced and sustained." From the Aesopian language and lurching syntax, what is the conclusion struggling to emerge? Growth is great, more is good, bigger is better.

That assumption permeates the thought of Chairman Strong, who came to prominence via the presidency of a Canadian holding company. What was good for the shareholders of Power Corporation is evidently good enough for the delegates of "Only One Earth": "I do not believe we can cease to grow. No growth is not a viable policy for any society today."

So much for growth-wariness in Canada. What about our good examples?

Despite a recent flurry in the realms of cleanliness and conservation — a Great Lakes Water Quality Control treaty, a show of concern for salmon and whales — we have set few examples of which earthkeepers could be proud.

Nowhere has a more majestic landscape been more horribly defaced by the scrofula of commercial exploitation. From the conjunction of nature's cataracts and man's wax museums at Niagara to the litter which caused Prince Phillip to snort when visiting some northern settlement "This place is a garbage dump," you trace the spoor not of the earthkeeper but of the earth-trampler.

If you would see his monument, look around. At slums and slurbs in town and country. At outdoor billboards and overhead wiring. At railways and freeways that sever the city-dweller from his waterfront. Breath his air. Hear his noise. Smell his stench.

So much for Canada's good examples. What about our emnity for ecocides?

There are many evil governments doing many evil things, but the only ecocide at large in the state-system is the government of the United States. "Only we can prevent forests" is the motto of those squadrons of its air force whose mission is defoliation, and for once the boast is justified. More than 100 million pounds of herbicides have been sprayed by U.S. C-123 cargo planes on South Vietnamese forests and jungles so that the enemy would have no place to hide, on South Vietnamese rice paddies so that the enemy would have nothing to eat.

Then nature's dominoes began to fall. Soils deprived of nutrient are no longer fertile. Animal species become extinct. Flooding is extensive. Malnutrition scourges survivors. Birth abnormalities rise. Malaria is rampant. The tropical ecosystems — so delicate, fragile and vulnerable — are subjected to trauma from which they may never fully recover, which they may not indeed survive.

The governments of Canada not once condemned this ecocide.

When we began peacekeeping in 1956, our leaders were well-regarded in many capitals abroad, our armed forces were as good as any for the job, we enjoyed a reputation for disinterestedness and as a peaceable kingdom. Our credentials for peacekeeping were in good order. Our credentials for earthkeeping are not, and it's time we started to upgrade them.

A Contest Of Opposites

By T. R. B., New Republic

A Nixon-McGovern contest, if it comes to that, will be one of the most incongruous in American history. Few men could be more unalike. Mr. Nixon is watchful and remote, McGovern direct and open. The former distrusts youth; the latter relies on it. They do not see things alike at all. For the president national honor is continuing in Vietnam; for the senator it is getting out. Essentially the president wants to bolster the American status quo while the senator wants to give it a big shake.

Mr. Nixon, we think, deserves well of America, uncomfortable though we find that admission in some ways. Sooner or later, somebody had to break the ice with Peking and with Moscow and Mr. Nixon did it, and also started direct negotiation on arms cuts. It is a splendid service, we think, and it took a lifelong professional communist-hater like Mr. Nixon to do it. The screams coming from some of the "betrayed" right-wing organizations indicate the problem. What a tizzy they would have been in if Hubert Humphrey had been elected in 1968 and tried to go to Moscow! And who would have led the denunciation? Why, presumably, Richard Nixon. Since the task had to be done he has been the right man, in many ways, to do it.

A Love Affair

So now will an ungrateful national reject Mr. Nixon for a second term? It will be a fascinating campaign to watch, particularly if George McGovern, the minister's son from South Dakota and bomber pilot, World War II, with Distinguished Flying Service Cross, is the Democratic nominee. The press is having a love affair with McGovern momentarily, but we don't think it will last; it is trying to make amends for having underrated the senator for so long. Also it's taking advantage of having a fresh face and a new personality to exploit.

Actually, in many ways, McGovern is an accidental candidate. He doesn't fit into the normal pattern. The normal candidate is the compromiser who can assume the bland, middle position required under the two-party system where each of the rival coalitions jockeys for the vital centre.

Moral Outrage

McGovern has one big asset: he doesn't look like a run-of-the-mine politician or like any other politician you ever saw before. You may not agree with him but you feel that he is sincere, which he is. Whether this is a lasting asset for a candidate remains to be seen. He is not very eloquent; his delivery is rather dry. He does have a sense of moral outrage. He has taken positions on a lot of matters which are probably impolitic, that the federal government should not get involved in the abortion issue, that penalties for marijuana are often too harsh, that after the war there should be an amnesty for draft resisters. Former attorney general John Mitchell, who will run Mr. Nixon's campaign, is rubbing his hands gloatingly. What a chance this will be for Spiro Agnew, he reflects, or maybe for John Connally if Mr. Nixon makes the switch.

But the big things that anger McGovern aren't these but the failures, as he sees them, of the American social order. Why is it that the average man can't seem to make his voice heard in Washington? Why doesn't somebody correct the increasingly regressive tax system? Why is welfare left, for all the talk, in such an appalling mess?

McGovern has answers for these problems, such things as a "minimum income grant" which we are all probably going to be writing about shortly. It amounts to wholesale reform of the tax structure which would result in a redistribution of income. Mr. McGovern discusses these items so mildly and casually that they do not seem radical. But make no doubt of it, in the deeper meaning of the word, they are.

The question — perhaps the basic question of 1972 — is whether a tide us running; whether the country has reached such a state of cynicism about things as they are, and the rules of an Establishment that it will take a bold step in a new direction.

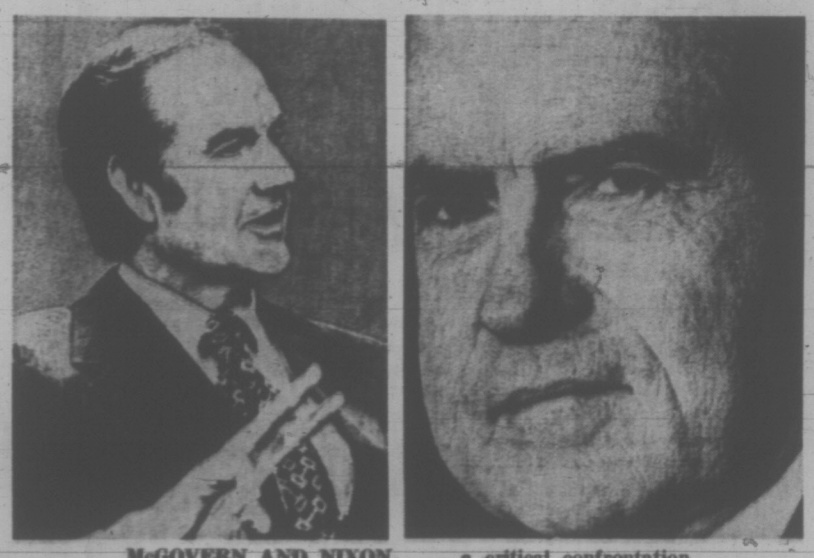
"Radical?" says McGovern disarmingly. "Let me say I come from the state of South Dakota where there are two-to-one Republican odds against me. I have been elected four times in that state. Ordinarily we don't send wild-eyed radicals to the U.S. Senate from South Dakota."

Yes, he agrees mildly, the proposals to cut the defence budget, to end the Vietnam war, to reduce the loopholes in the tax law and give the middle class and the poor a better deal, "while they do represent a break with the past, I think that is what the American people want."

Deep Loathing

Does a man with these notions have a chance of election against an entrenched White House incumbent? Who knows? With unemployment almost as high as ever, with prices still rising, with 25 per cent of plant capacity unused, with a deep loathing for the war, Mr. Nixon may have difficulties. Another thing to remember is that nobody really loves Mr. Nixon a whole lot; people may admire him, and certainly the banking and business interests are going to give him the biggest campaign support ever if George McGovern gets the nod, but in terms of personal popularity whatever the opposite of charisma is, Mr. Nixon has tons of it.

One thing more should be said. If George McGovern is nominated and elected this will be one of those rare "critical" elections. They come at infrequent intervals, about 28 or 36 years apart, and one is long overdue — the last was FDR in 1932. McGovern believes what he says and his views mark a new direction. If the public is in the mood to elect him it almost certainly means a political realignment.



McGOVERN AND NIXON . . . a critical confrontation.

Bennett Scatters Crumbs

RUNNING FOR HIS LIFE

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

(From a column in The Sun)

There are two matters that come to mind in the construction workers vs. Victoria situation. The first is the obvious idiocy of demonstrators swacking cabinet mainisters over the head and the certainty that little scene on TV will be worth a good 50,000 votes for Social Credit. Plus the fact that it will probably provide Mr. Bennett with the ammunition he has been feverishly searching for to call an election.

* * *

The second is a faint understanding of the point of view of men out of work — they were locked out, remember — who have been sitting and watching this ludicrous, junketeering circus of the B.C. cabinet through the boondocks. Mr. Bennett, a shrewdly cynical man at the best of times, has outdone himself on this dust-raising cavalcade. Politicians heading for election roundup time, we know, traditionally sprinkle the goodies en route. But there has been something so disgustingly blatant, so insulting, about this cynical traipsing through the tall grass, scattering crumbs for the scrambling natives.

The dispensing of the usual trinkets — scrolls, teacups and cuff links to the local mayor and their wives. The usual droppings of promises that highways will be improved, government buildings erected and green belts created. Most blatant of all, the vague bribery promised for the future in Kelowna — gift taxes junked, unspecified crumbs for pensioners and the handicapped, a token increase in the minimum wage, etc. bribery, etc.

* * *

An astute journalist wrote the other day that Mr. Bennett shows all the signs of a man running for his life. His desperate tactics — flinging vaguely-specified goodies out the windows of his speeding convoy confirms that. The New Westminster demonstrators, while hurting their own cause, were an expression of the frustration of men not at work who have had to witness a slipping old man who is trying to buy his way back into office.

Canada Gets a Kissinger

By GEORGE BAIN
The Globe and Mail

Whatever became of Mitchell Sharp?

The Canadian Press a few days ago carried a report saying that Ivan Head, soft-spoken eminence grise of Canadian foreign policy, as it was pleased to call him, would be appearing before the Commons committee on external affairs to "discuss aspects of policy-making in the Trudeau era."

(An eminence grise is a special assistant who writes publicity for his boss as a sideline, thereby ingratiating himself and enhancing his influence.)

But surely the person from whom the committee can get all the information it needs or wants on all aspects of foreign policy-making in the Trudeau era is the man to whom the responsibility for foreign policy was assigned by Mr. Trudeau, i.e., Mitchell William Sharp.

It is all very well for a Richard Nixon to have his Henry Kissinger — and, come to think of it, whatever became of Secretary of State William Rogers? — but, in the U.S. system, all executive power is exercised in the name of the president, and the cabinet secretaries serve at his pleasure.

This has not been — not up to now — our system. The prime minister's office is not the fountainhead of all foreign policy, so far as we know, and, therefore, there is no place for, or need of, an East Block Kissinger-substitute (or Mini-Kiss).

If there are things which a Mini-Kiss can tell the committee that Mitchell Sharp cannot, what is Mitchell Sharp doing answering questions in the House of Commons, or holding the portfolio, for that matter?

However, if Mitchell Sharp is, in fact, in charge of Canadian foreign policy, operating as head of the department of external affairs, what is someone who is in a position of no responsibility doing informing a parliamentary committee on "aspects of policy-making in the Trudeau era"?

We are in danger here of creating a new class of person who claims the prerogatives of both the civil servant and the politician — the anonymity of the civil servant, but the direct hand in policy-making of the responsible minister — and is neither. Mr. Head has no responsibility, either to the committee, or to Parliament: he is simply and solely the agent of the prime minister.

The same account said that "the scheduled June 13 meeting between Prime Minister Trudeau's special assistant and the MPs will be strictly off-the-record" and that "to enhance the informal atmosphere, the meeting will take place in a room on the Senate side of Parliament's centre block rather than in . . . a Commons committee room."

What sort of obsequious nonsense is this for a parliamentary committee to be engaged in?

Parliamentary committees hear all sorts of people — ministers, senior civil servants, distinguished experts from outside government — but they hear them (unless travelling abroad) in the ordinary circumstances of the committee room, and, unless there is good reason, in public.

There is no evident reason why Mr. Head should not say his piece in public. It is customary practice — for instance, they are not named in the House — to accord public servants a degree of anonymity because they are not responsible for policy. But Mr. Head is not a public servant; he is a politician, in effect, an extension of the prime minister.

Does he have material to convey in which considerations of national security may be involved? If that is the case, the committee would do better to get it from the responsible minister. (Unless, of course, the purpose of the exercise is to keep Mitchell Sharp from finding out.)

But what there is a very strong temptation to believe is that the whole business — the change of venue, the secrecy — are for the purpose of making a star-turn of the occasion (the Mini-Kiss syndrome), of aggrandizing the prime minister's office by aggrandizing an agent of it. Committees should not let themselves in for that sort of thing.

Webb and Knapp

Webb and Knapp (Canada) Ltd., the development company that soared with Place Ville Marie in Montreal and came to earth in Burnaby with Lake City Industrial Park as its principal holding, reports a $459,999 net profit for 1971, compared with $548,758 in 1970.

On a per share basis, the earnings were 15 cents for 1971, compared with 18 cents fr 1970.

Edward R. Loftus, president, Charles B. Riley and Elmer W. Martin, all of Burnaby, acquired control of Webb and Knapp from its liquidator in the spring of 1971. Their Western Pacific Projects Ltd. had operated the western assets of Webb and Knapp through a management agreement.

The former realty giant began as an offshoot of William Zeckendorf's Webb and Knapp Inc. of New York.

Delta Hotels

Delta Hotels Ltd. has sold for $250,000 its secured debentures in the Mount Garibaidi Resorts to National Nursing Homes Ltd.

Mount Garibaldi, a ski village, went into receivership a couple of years ago, and has not been completed or occupied.

Delta president William Pattison said he expects National Nursing homes will announce in about a week what the company plans to do with the resort.

Worldwide

Worldwide Energy Co. Ltd. nearly doubled gross revenues in the first quarter from $1,104,000 in 1971 but earnings rose only slightly to $155,000 or four cents a share from $151,000 or four cents a share.

First quarter gross this year was $2,64,000.

The company said accounting practices connected with far northern areas kept the earnings from rising to $341,000 or nine cents a share.

Afton Defends Canex Pact Denies Teck Harmed by Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — As the court battle for control of Afton Mines Ltd. continues, Norman B. Keevil Jr., Teck Corp. Ltd. executive vice-president, testified that his firm's majority block of Afton shares includes about 209,000 which are in escrow.

Keevil gave the evidence during questioning Thursday by John Bouck, representing Canadian Exploration Ltd. (Canex). Canex is a defendant in the British Columbia Supreme Court hearing in which Teck is seeking an interlocutory injunction to prevent implementation of an agreement between Canex and Afton's directors.

The agreement would have the effect of reducing Teck's shareholdings in Afton from more than 50 per cent to about 35 per cent, while Canex would gain a 30 per cent interest and take over development of Afton's copper ore property near Kamloops, which has been estimated to be worth upward of $200 million.

AFTON'S BIDS

Teck lawyer Jack Giles completed his argument for the injunction Thursday after which Mr. Justice Richard Anderson started hearing argument from Bouck and B. W. F. McLoughlin, lawyer for the directors of Afton.

McLoughlin claimed there was "no evidence of any irreparable harm to Teck, and certainly not to any of the other shareholders of Afton" to support Teck's request for the injunction.

He also argued that the directors of Afton had done what they had to do by signing the agreement with Canex.

"They could not accept instructions from an outside party who claimed — I repeat claimed — that it had majority control," he said.

FIRST REFUSAL

In previous sessions of the hearing, Giles stated that the Canex-Afton agreement had been signed after Teck notified Afton that it had acquired over 30 per cent of Afton's shares through open market purchases totalling about $16 million.

He said Canex had a right of first refusal for management of the Afton property and that the Afton directors should have exploited the competition between Canex and Teck. He said Teck had told Afton it would have offered better terms than any other developer.

Giles said that Teck's purchases of Afton shares had commenced about May 14 or 15. He was also questioned about Teck's experience with operating mines in B.C.

The hearing continues today.

BILLION $$$ MUD

GREAT BEND, Kan. (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Reserve Bank, forced by ecology problems to discontinue the burning of battered currency, has found a recycling customer for ground up paper money.

Davis Mud and Chemical Co. of Great Bend is purchasing the wrinkled money for use in drilling oil and gas wells.

Thick slush, vital in the drilling process, is used to seal lost circulation zones. Currently numerous kinds of materials, ranging from walnut shells to newspapers, are ground and used to make drilling mud.

The government destroys about 2,500 tons of currency per year with a face value of $12 billion. Davis pays $10 per ton for the ground currency and an official said if it proves economical the concern may purchase the product from other reserve banks.

VSE Sets Hard Line On Audits

VANCOUVER (CP) — The tightening-up program introduced into the operations of the Vancouver Stock Exchange extends to the auditors of member firms, exchange president Thomas A. Dohm told the annual convention of the British Columbia Institute of Chargered Accountants Thursday.

"In the matter of reporting on members' accounts we intend to rigidly enforce the requirements and we do not wish this to come as any surprise to the members or their auditors," he said.

Phil Barter, retiring president of the accountants institute, said later the warning was welcomed and in line with the policies stressed by his organization, which will be pleased to co-operate with the exchange.

TRUST MISPLACED

Dohm noted that there had been "rare occasions" in which the trust of the exchange in a small number of members and their auditors had been misplaced.

There is, he emphasized, no provision for laxity in reporting but some of the reports "have contained errors in classification, computation of margin requirements, working capital and other matters."

"These were, in my opinion, preventable errors and some responsibility must devolve on the auditors who have assisted the members with the reporting statements," Dohm said.

Such criticism, he warned, could be grounds for the exchange asking for the removal of an auditor's name from the VSE's approved panel of auditors.

TEL SHARES FOR WORKERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — An employee share-purchase plan was approved Thursday by the Canadian Transport Commission for the British Columbia Telephone Co.

B.C. Tel employees will be able to buy 100,000 ordinary, voting shares of the company within the limits of one for each $500 of annual income or a total of 70 shares each.

The company, controlled by General Telephone and Electronics of New York, has 3,236,625 ordinary shares outstanding last Dec. 31.

The company said the purchase price would not be less than 85 per cent of the average market price on the day the payroll-purchase plan is put into effect.

The plan would be open to the more than 9,500 employees of B.C. Tel and Okanagan Telephone Co.

The company said the plan would be an incentive as we will as a means by which employers could share in the results of improved performance.

What Price Nationalism? Takeover Bill Probe Asked

OTTAWA (CP) — Critics seeking tougher foreign ownership control legislation should ask themselves the price to be paid in lost jobs and lowering living standards and who is to pay that price, the Canadian Manufacturers Association said Thursday.

It was among groups testifying to the Commons finance committee on the takeover legislation, roasted on one side as woefully inadequate and greeted cautiously on the other as a possible threat to American investment wanted for regional industrial expansion and general development.

The manufacturers' brief was a restatement of former views and included an April 14 letter sent to Prime Minister Trudeau.

That letter said the proposed takeover legislation did not conflict with the association goals for continued economic growth.

The submission requoted the views of former president Gerard Filion that foreign-owned firms are providing hundreds of thousands of jobs, paying taxes and sustaining cities and towns across the country.

"In limiting its initiatives in this area of non-resident ownership to the review of takeovers of companies by foreigners, Ottawa is merely facing up to these inescapable realities—and also to the resistence of most provincial governments to any restrictions on the inflow of new foreign capital.

"Those who criticize the foreign takeover review legislation as tame and inadequate have every right to their view but they are being less than frank in continually failing to answer two fundamental questions: What price should Canadians be willing to pay in lost jobs and lower living standards in return for the kind of hard-line legislation they want?

"And whose jobs and living standards do they mean to sacrifice on the altar of nationalism?"

The proposed bill would screen takeovers of firms with assets of $250,000 or more and with sales of $3 million or more annually.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce said in its brief the government should accept the responsibility of saying what is wrong with any proposed takeover.

Instead, the chamber said, the takeovers bill puts the burden of proof on the participants in the takeover to show it will be of substantial benefit to Canada.

The chamber said it has been studying the question of foreign ownership and control of industry and that the government should first announce a new national industrial strategy.

In deciding whether a proposed takeover should be allowed to proceed, the government is to take into account its compatibility with "national industrial and economic policies."

But, the chamber said, until such policies are clearly stated, the decision on any particular takeover proposal "becomes a personal and subjective judgment on the part . . . of the government of the day."

Disposable Camera Developed

CALGARY (CP) — Proflex Ltd., a Calgary conglomerate, announced Thursday development of a pocket-size, disposable camera.

The camera, which weighs 1.5 ounces and has only five moving parts, is a sealed unit containing 12 frames of 16 millimetre color film.

Turbines Spin in Bare Labrador

CHURCHILL FALLS, Nfld. (CP) — When explorer Jacques Cartier discovered Labrador in the summer of 1534, he wrote that this northeastern tip of the North American continent had "nothing of any use to mankind."

"The lad God gave to Cain," is how Cartier described the harsh rocky coastline and sparse black spruce he saw as his ship picked its way through coastal ice to the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

However, four and a half centuries later, the rushing waters of the Churchill River in central Labrador are spinning the most powerful turbines on the continent at a billion-dollar hydro-electric complex.

The development, located 700 miles northeast of Montreal, will be officially inaugurated today by Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

RIGHTS LEASED

Newfoundland leased the water and mineral rights in the area to the British Newfoundland Corp., which owns the giant project, through a subsidiary, Churchill Falls Labrador Corp., while Quebec's provincially-owned power monopoly will buy nearly all the energy produced.

The ceremonies here today mark the near-completion of a venture that began evolving on the drawing board in 1951, and involved high-level negotiations on Wall Street, in Canadian boardrooms, and among provincial politicians in Newfoundland and Quebec.

In 1954, the Newfoundland government, which was looking for ways to diversify the economy, assigned water and mineral rights to the newly-formed British Newfoundland Corp. Originally a group of seven British merchant banks, it was nicknamed Brinco, and has expanded over the years to 29 major shareholders. Shares have also been sold to the Canadian public.

SIX-YEAR JOB

Actual construction work began six years ago, and since that time millions of tons of rock and earth have been moved to construct roads, a permanent community, an artificial watershed covering 2,500 miles on the central Labrador plateau, and miles of underground tunnels and chambers.

The flow of water over the 245-foot-high Churchill Falls, 61 feet higher than the falls at Niagara, is being diverted through inclined penstock tunnels carved through the Labardor rock toward turbines located in a cavernous excavation nearly 1,000 feet below ground.

When all 11 giant turbines, each producing 475,000 kilowatts of electricity, have been installed, the flow of the falls will be completely shut off. In the meantime, two turbines have been supplying power to the Hydro-Quebec system since earlier this year, and a third will begin spinning during next week's ceremonies.

About 85 per cent of the work on the power station has been completed, according to David Willock, Brinco's public relations director, who recently showed a group of reporters around the site.

When the last of 11 turbines is spinning some time next year, Churchill Falls will produce about 34.5 bilion kilowatt hours a year of power — about 10 per cent of Canada's estimated power requirement in 1976.

According to Brinco executives, the complex negotiations which led to the financing of the development resulted in a number of "firsts" in financial circles.

HIGH FINANCE

A $500-million placement of mortgage bonds in the United States is cited as "the largest corporate new issue ever handled in Wall Street," while a $150-million line of credit at seven Canadian banks was the largest-ever of its kind.

Hydro-Quebec, described by one company official as the "only logical client" for Churchill Falls' power, signed a $5-billion, 65-year purchase contract in May, 1969. Depending on Quebec's actual requirements, and the planned development of power in the James Bay region by 1985, it will likely have surplus power to sell to the energy-starved northeastern U.S.

However, work on developing the energy potential of the Churchill River probably won't be completed when the final turbine is installed at the present site.

Both Brinco and the Newfoundland government are hopeful that another half-billion-dollar project will be started to develop power on the lower area of the Churchill River.

However, tougher negotiations than those which resulted in a go-ahead for the current project by the Newfoundland government nearly 20 years ago may be in store, according to John Crosbie, the province's finance minister.

We are interested in other terms and conditions than those which prevailed during the initial development of the Churchill," he told this reporter during a recent interview.

"Within a year, it's certainly possible for the project to start . . . but we've got a lot of talking to do yet," he said.

The recently-elected Progressive Conservative government of Newfoundland is reviewing all the financial commitments and plans made by the previous government of premier Joseph Smallwood, a central figure in the original plans two decades ago.

When construction began at Churchill Falls six years ago, the word "ecology" had little meaning outside scientific circles. However, Brinco officials are now quick to point to conservation meaures they have taken during construction.

A conservation co-ordination group guides field conservation programs in the area conducted by the federal and Newfoundland governments, Memorial University at St. John's, and the company itself.

In addition, engineer Richard D. Bolvin, project manager at Churchill Falls, points out that "we're flooding 2,000 square miles and we're not moving a single, solitary soul."

UNINHABITED

The Churchill Falls area was uninhabited both by whites and native people until the first surveyors and construction workers arrived a decade ago.

So desolate is the area that in 1843 the Hudson's Bay Co. abandoned a trading post not far from the falls.

Surprisingly, when inflation is a problem affecting most long-term construction projects, the pioneering venture in power generation is within its $350-million budget.

A fast cost-reporting system has been in effect throughout the years of construction — with a report of cost highlights a week after the end of each month and a full report within 30 days.

Above ground at Churchill Falls, a permanent community for more than 1,000 people has been built. It includes single-family homes, multiple dwellings, a modern school, stores, a 21-room hotel, bowling alley, swimming pool and 12-bed hospital.

However, if life is comfortable and salaries high, it is also exceedingly dull.

There is no place to go, no way to get a change of scenery except making the 90-minute jet flight to Montreal or St. John's Nfld. Along with movies, week-old video-tapes, skidooing in winter, a major social activity is drinking at house parties or the town's two bars.

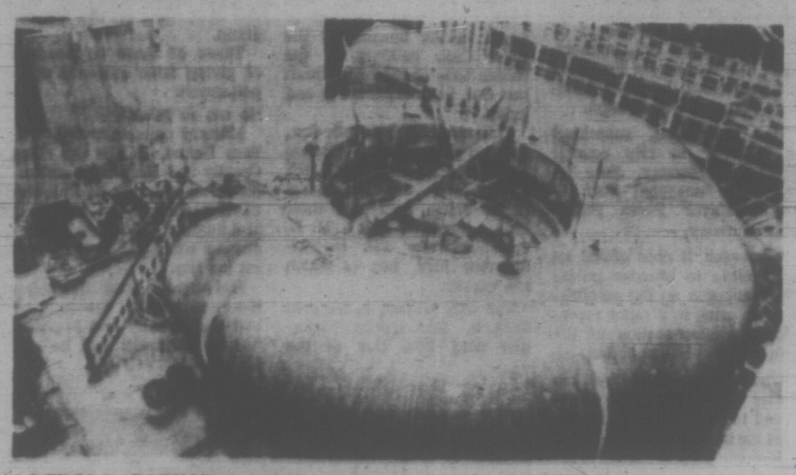
Indeed, it is frequently too cold to do much else — for the average January temperature is nine degrees below zero and can plunge as low as 55 below zero. In July, the average termperature is 56 degrees, but black flies make life outdoors almost unbearable.

About 85 per cent of the workers have been Newfoundlanders, while most of the remainder have been from Quebec.

The contract between Newfoundland and the corporation calls for preferential hiring for residents of the province, with Quebecers being called on next to fill vacant jobs before applicants are considered from other areas.

"The eventual population of the town will be about 1,200," according to Gerard LaFontaine.

Although he is unsure how many people will become permanent residents, there will undoubtedly by a few who will decide to call this isolated Labrador community "home."



SCROLL CASING, integral part of hydro generation equipment at Newfoundland's Churchill Falls project, weighs over 200,000 pounds. Water is forced through the case, which in turn revolves massive generator mounted on top of it. (CP Wirephoto.)

CELLULOSE SALES RISE . . . LOSSES UP TOO

VANCOUVER (CP) — Problems of Columbia Cellulose Ltd. are difficult but the situation is far from hopeless, James E. Wall, its new president and chief executive officer, told the annual meeting Thursday.

The meeting coincided with announcement of the results of the company's first quarter, when sales rose sharply to $25.1 million from $16.7 million but operating losses also rose to $2.5 million from $1.1 million.

Net loss for the quarter was $4.2 million as against $1.6 million for the same period in 1971.

* * *

Wall said the big problem was getting production up to a figure close to actual capacity. During 1971, he reported, net sales of $83 million represented only about 75 per cent of the productive capacity.

"This being the case, it was impossible to cover the fixed costs necessary to keep the company in operation, so the well-reported 1971 loss occurred." (It was $48.7 million).

Another company officer said after the meeting that a loss was anticipated again in 1972, but that the amount would be about the extent of the decline in the American dollar. The company is, like many forest companies with large sales in the United States, having exchange problems as well as others.

Wall noted considerable improvement in pulp and lumber markets and foresaw a better demand.

* * *

"This time around we must improve and cement our supply relationship with those customers who will still need us when supply once more exceeds demand," he said.

Wall, a vice-president of the parent U.S. company, Celanese of America, was sent here to take over after the departure of George Scrimshaw, the former president.

Realtor Resigns From Planning Commission

His resignation, submitted in a letter to city council dated last Monday, June 12, has been "accepted with regret," Mayor Peter Pollen said Thursday.

"However, it does afford an opportunity to broaden public representation on the commission, to bring in a more representative cross-section of the community," Pollen added.

When approached by the Times this week Genge declined to comment on the reasons for his resignation.

Policemen Lied, Arson Trial Told

The Victoria county court trial of a man accused of arson in the burning of the Fleet Club building at the Naden base of CFB Esquimalt last Oct. 24 is expected to end today.

This morning, Kenneth Cox, defence lawyer for Gordon Allen McLaughlin, 53, 1355 Lyall, and crown counsel Brian Smith presented their final address to Judge M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake and the 12-member jury, two of which are women.

The only witness in his own defence, McLaughlin Thursday said that five of the Crown's witnesses had lied under oath while on the witness stand.

Three of these he accused of giving false evidence were policemen.

'20 OR 30 TIMES'

Military policeman Cpl. William Deane, RCMP Cpl. Dan Creally and Esquimalt constable Peter Marriott had all testified earlier in the trial that McLaughlin had refused to answer when asked if he had set the fire.

McLaughlin said Thursday this was not so. He said he had told Creally and Marriott "20 or 30 times" that he had not started the blaze in the Fleet Club building.

Cross-examined by Crown counsel Brian Smith, McLaughlin said Cpl. Lawrence Brown also gave wrong testimony.

Brown had testified that he had heard the sound of a motor racing one minute after the fire alarm had sounded, run out of the Fleet Club building and seen a car similar to McLaughlin's leaving the rear of an adjacent building.

McLaughlin said this could not be right because he had left the building "20 or 30 minutes" before.

McLaughlin also said that the club's vice-president at the time of the incident, Dennis Turgeon, was also wrong when he testified that in January McLaughlin had threatened him and the club in a phone call.

ASKED TO LEAVE

Questioned by Smith, McLaughlin admitted that he had been asked to leave the club on New Year's Eve but said it was not because of excessive drinking.

He said the real reason he had been suspended was because he had become "vocal" about a stag party he had attended there and had said he would report it to the RCMP.

Asked by Smith why he had not gone to work after the incident, McLaughlin said:

"I wanted to stay away until the thing was settled. I knew if I went down Monday they (the military police) would be there again."

McLaughlin admitted he'd been drinking while on duty that Sunday.

In addition to beer, he said he had found "four or five ounces of vodka and tonic water" at the bottom of his locker and drank that.

'Drug Bus' Eyed

Further study will be given a Narcotic Addiction Foundation proposal, which would cost $143,000 over two years to spread the word around the province on the dangers of drug abuse, a spokesman for the government's Council on Drugs said Thursday.

The proposal was discussed in a closed session between executives of the NAF and the government committee.

The spokesman said following the meeting that the NAF proposal would involve purchase of a van which would be staffed and equipped with movies, sound tracks and other information on drug abuse.

The $143,000 would be used to purchase the van, renovate it and operate it for a period of two years.

SEEK OPINIONS

"There was an amicable discussion and the council decided that it would try to canvas public opinion on the local level before considering the matter further," the spokesman said. He added that results of the canvas would be available in the "next month or so."

He said the council did approve other grants to the NAF, including $3,150 for three students to conduct a summer occupational program with drug addicts and $3,900 for four persons who would work on the NAF's in touch project.

This project sends workers into the streets to meet and get to know the addicts. They then provide liaison between the addict and the agencies that can help him.

GUIDANCE

"The idea is that many drug addicts who need help will not approach the official agencies themselves. But if we can put him in touch with another young person who can give him guidance, then we can get a chance to help him," the spokesman said.

The council also confirmed its earlier agreement to provide $14,000 to establish a library which would be open to the public and provide information on drug abuse problems.

GARTRELL . . . 'justify' their action

Anglicans Plan Lay School

By LEE MILLS
Times Staff

A lay school of theology, sponsored by the Anglican Church, will be established immediately in Victoria.

Gartrell said the school would use existing church buildings. He said that he could not release an exact date as details are still being worked out.

The reason for a lay school is that, "to live in the world as Christians, they must (laymen) justify what they are doing as Christians."

Gartrell expressed the need for an inter-communion of churches in all of Canada.

LITTLE DIFFERENCES

The Roman Catholic Commission, that has been working more than a year, has found little difference in the teachings of the holy communion with that of the Anglican Church, Gartrell said. Within the not to distant future, perhaps within five years, Gartrell foresees the Roman Catholic Church joining in an inter-communion with the Anglican Church.

"The role of the clergy is also different," said Gartrell, "in the past laity has expected too much. Administration and leadership rightfully belong to the laity. The ministry is a joint thing the whole church is involved, clergy and laity alike."

Gartrell said that this is something laymen have not realized in the past.

Gartrell said he is distressed over the situation of women in the church. "Anyone who is qualified can preach, women included, there is nothing to stop them. Women seem to be ready to let the men do it. While women make up 35 per cent of the general senate, they come to the senate but they don't run."

MANY JOBS OPEN

"There are many jobs open to women, positions on the executive council and lay secretary are but a few. I'd like to see them run for office."

The Anglican Church of Women are faced with the decision as to whether to seek integration in the same way as the national board, or whether they would continue to operate as a diocesan organization. No formal motion has been made, said Gartrell.

The question of minimum stipends and allowances for clergy will be discussed to the synod conference this week.

Gartrell told delegates to the synod Thursday night that "sometimes clergy appear afraid to let people be free free to doubt, to reject, to desert. Their very security seems bound up with people conforming, not questioning; bound up with liturgical niceties, orthodox practices."

'Wrong Sized' Trees Block Odd Fellows' Union View

Trees help to beautify the downtown area, most residents would agree, but it seems they can also be a nuisance.

That, at any rate, is the opinion of members of the Odd Fellows' Union who have written to city council complaining about the Pirone ash trees outside the Odd Fellows' Hall at 1323 Douglas.

The fraternal order says it understood the trees were to be of a "dwarf variety," yet they have turned out to be anything but that.

"They have grown to a height where they affect the view from the upstairs windows," used by members for viewing parades and other events, the letter says.

"We suggest that if the trees can't be pruned to a suitable size they be removed and planters installed as has been done on other blocks on Douglas."

Parks director Cliff Bare said the trees were special "street-tailored" ones planted about 10 years ago, and it was difficult to estimate just how high they would grow.

"In our ideal growing conditions they sometimes take off and grow a lot more than they would in eastern parts," he said.

Reaction of another city hall official to the letter was: "No matter what you do, you can't please everyone."

Organist Centre To Continue

The Vancouver Island Centre of the Royal Canadian College of Organists has voted to continue operations.

Newly-elected president John Lenaghan said today "there was a possibility of disbanding the group because of a lack of participation by members."

He said the group's general function is to "further church and choral music."

LAND MEET OFF TO SECRET START

First working session of the mayor's special committee on commercial-service land use in Saanich got off to a secret start Thursday.

The first question posed by chairman Ald. Frank Waring was whether to hold all meetings behind a closed door, which he said was typical Saanich procedure.

Those present, including ex-official representatives from Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Capital Regional District, did not discuss the question.

Waring called the meeting to order, greeted the chamber and regional district visitors and then said:

"The first question is whether to hold open meetings. It is customary in Saanich to hold meetings regarding land use in camera. I would suggest this be done and will entertain a motion."

Mayor Hugh Curtis set up the committee, which will work closely with Victoria and the regional district, to recommend future policy for the creation of zoning or related matters enabling service-type industry to situate.

Atco May Get Soviet Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — A factory to manufacture prefabricated housing may be set up in Russia by Calgary's Atco Industries Ltd. as a result of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin's October visit to Canada.

Atco Industries chief executive officer, R. D. Southern, said Thursday his company has submitted a proposal at the request of the Soviet government and is waiting for a response.

Southern said that if a technical contract for the project were obtained it would involve fees of $5 million to $7 million to create facilities in the Soviet Union for manufacture of the kind of portable housing used in Canadian resource projects such as mines and construction in remote areas.

Atco companies operate in 33 countries, employ 1,800 and have annual sales of $50 million. It has set up prefab factories in other countries. Its products include portable field accommodation, air-lift camps for Arctic use, multi-storey housing for offshore drilling platforms, portable classrooms, hospitals, offices and mobile homes.

Southern said he was visited by a mission headed by the chairman of Gostroi, the Soviet agency for planning all housing in Russia, and by a second mission 10 days ago.

The Atco proposal submitted this week includes shipping of some sample units to Russia, training Soviet tradesmen in Canada, designing products for Soviet conditions and work flow and machinery recommendations.

'Never Certain Who Owns What'

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's foreign takeovers review bill will severely hamper the day-to-day business operations of most independent petroleum companies operating in Canada, whether or not they now are largely Canadian-owned, a representative of the industry said today.

Bob Ruben of Calgary, president of North Canadian Oils Co. and an officer of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, said the necessity of submitting prospective deals to a government review board before they can be made final will kill a lot of transactions.

The bill empowers a government agency to stop any sale of the shares or assets of a company to foreign buyers involving more than five per cent of its ownership, unless the company can prove that the deal is of "significant benefit to Canada."

CANADIANS IN CONTROL

Mr. Ruben said most independent oil companies have shares traded on stock exchanges some of them on exchanges both in Canada and the U.S.—and they cannot be certain at any given momet where five per cent of their ownership is held. Large numbers of shares are held in brokers' names for their customers, and the company has no way of knowing who those customers are.

In the case of his company, Mr. Ruben said that perhaps 70 per cent of the shares are owned by Americans. But he maintained North Canadian Oils is a Canadian firm, controlled in Canada by its Canadian management, trying to be good corporate citizens.

He said companies like his like to move quickly into a new exploration area or similar enterprise, and want 25 to 50 per cent of the action to make their investment worthwhile. To have to come to Ottawa to seek approval of each such deal and wait perhaps three months for a government decision would likely make such investments impossible.

The takeover review bill does not encourage more Canadian investment, he added. What is really needed is tax incentives for more Canadians to invest their ready cash in risk enterprise. The bill seemed concerned with secondary manufacturing industry, but had possible adverse effects on the petroleum and other extractive industries.

Instead of coming into play in any transaction involving five per cent or more of the common shares of a firm, the bill should apply only to share-dealings involving 20 or 25 per cent or more, he said.

SHOULDN'T BE HARMFUL

Instead of requiring a firm to show that its prospective share purchase will have significant benefits for Canada, a firm should be required to show that it would not be harmful or prejudicial to Canadian interests.

"We agree wholeheartedly that if it is to be detrimental or prejudicial to Canada, it should be stopped," he said.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) recalled last year's controversy about the proposed sale of control of Home Oil Co. Ltd. The government stopped the deal. Now, he noted, control of the company has been in the hands of a London, England, resident, Earl Beatty, who died this week. Home Oil had been controlled by R. A. Brown of Calgary, who sold his interest to the Consumers' Gas Co. of Toronto.

Chris Pike: Man of Year

Years of work with young people will be recognized Saturday when Chris Pike, 4590 Rocky Point Road, becomes Metchosin's man of the year.

Formerly cub and scout leader in the community, Pike later formed an adventure group for boys and girls called the Metchosin Junior Forest Wardens.

Pike has been involved in organizing weekly meetings, camps and summer trips to various parts of Vancouver Island.

Presentation of the award will come Saturday during Metchosin Days celebrations which will coincide with an inter-school track meet.

Marilyn Mowat, Miss Metchosin Firefighter, will officially open the celebrations at 2:30 p.m., during the afternoon there will be entertainment by musical groups.

Barbecued lamb, salmon, and watermelon will be served late in the afternoon.

REVENUERS ROUTED IN NUDE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Three state tax agents were sent naked into the street and another was held hostage for eight hours by a black businessman who demanded and got a meeting with Gov. Winfield Dunn over a $167 tax dispute.

The businessman, La-Saunders Hudson, 29, met with Dunn over Negro problems for an hour Thursday at a downtown hotel. He claimed he didn't owe the $167 in back sales taxes because of what he called Tennessee's wilful refusal "to deal with the needs of the black citizens of the state."

After the meeting, police took Hudson, co-owner of a dry cleaning firm, into custody without charge. He was held overnight in jail pending a police meeting today with the district attorney.

OIL SINKER SUNK BY BYLAW

SQUAMISH (CP) — District council decided after a public hearing to use a trailer bylaw to stop Reliance Sand and Gravel Ltd. of Vancouver from taking basalt from a mountainside for use in sinking oil slicks.

Council decided to order Reliance to remove trailers from the 80-acre site despite a statement by company president Neil Cook that the trailers are an industrial camp, and not in fact trailers.

Squamish residents have complained that removal of basalt from the mountainside will leave a permanent scar.

Cook had told council his company was prepared to post a $25,000 bond with council to ensure the site could be made into a park.

The basalt is treated for use on oil slicks, sinking the oil to the ocean floor where it can be eaten by underwater plant and animal life.

Against Idea

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Residents of Westsyde near Kamloops Thursday rejected a proposal that the area be incorporated into a district municipality.

Fifty-four per cent of the eligible voters turned out and voted 72 per cent against the proposal, preferring that Westwyde remain an unincorporated area. It is one of the largest such areas in British Columbia, with a population of 10,000.

The boundaries of the proposed municipality would have included the subdivision of Oak Hills, recently flooded by the North Thompson River.

Strike Settled

VANCOUVER (CP) —The Office and Technical Employees Union Thursday signed a first agreement covering 20 employees at Wire Rope Industries, ending a strike that began April 20. During the strike, the B.C. federation of Labor declared the company's products "hot." With the contract, the boycott is lifted.

Cost $110,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The cost of raising the sunken tug Haro Straits will be about $110,000. The Haro Straits went down in 420 feet of water three miles south of Point Roberts with a loss of five men.

UIC Says No

BURNABY (CP) — A bid by Burnaby school teachers to collect unemployment insurance during the summer when schools are closed has been turned down by the Unemployment Insurance Commission. "In general, the regulations state that teachers are not eligible during the summer because they're not considered to have an interruption of earnings until the next teaching season," said Helen Patterson, of the UIC.

Judge to Run

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) —Judge Maurice Mulligan of Vancouver provincial court is to retire June 22 to seek nomination as Conservative candidate in the New Westminster federal riding. Judge Mulligan, 45, is the only announced candidate.

Appeal Meeting

TRAIL (CP) — A United Appeal conference here this weekend is expected to draw representatives from 22 appeal organizations and 40 local beneficiary agencies in B.C. Delegates will discuss the voluntary dollar and whether it should be tax-imposed and government-controlled. Also under discussion will be the provincial gift tax.

Press Power Hit In Libel Suit

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Paul St. Marie, the lawyer acting for Vincent Cotroni in his $1.25 million libel action against Maclean's magazine said Thursday the power of the press is such that "only the courts can protect us from it."

Ste. Marie was answering arguments by A. J. Campbell, lawyer for Maclean's, that the magazine was justified in publishing an article on organized crime in 1963.

Ste. Marie protested the entering into evidence of foreign newspaper articles which mentioned Cotroni's name.

"How can we defend ourselves when we cannot examine the author of a story published in another country?" he asked.

MUST PROVE GUILT

Ste. Marie said a man cannot be merely presumed guilty, but has to be proven guilty of an offence, and that no man can be found guilty on hearsay, on the word of a third party.

"These are the two basic principles of law," he said.

Prior to Ste. Marie's rebuttal, Campbell had asked Mr. Justice Jean Ste. Germain that Cotroni's libel action be dismissed on the grounds that evidence at the trial had proven Maclean's comments about the plaintiff to be substantially true.

"There is a Mafia," Campbell said, and "the fact that a movie such as The Godfather is playing in so many cities in American and drawing such crowds is proof that the Mafia is in no way an imaginary organization."

CITES OTHER STORIES

Campbell said other articles published after the Maclean's article did nothing to enhance Mr. Cotroni's reputation.

Campbell read parts of various articles, including ones published by Montreal Star, Montreal Gazette, New York Times, New York Daily News, Toronto Globe and Mail, the U.S. Senate committee hearings on drugs, the Canadian McClelland Report in 1964, and the provincial Prevost commission report on organized crime.

After citing the various published extracts, Campbell said "a man's reputation is based on hearsay of what others have to say about him."

Roustabouts Are Gone But The Circus Still Greatest Show on Earth

By Walter McKinnon

Never again will he strike delicious terror in the hearts of little kids with a satanic stream of invective over some little thing like a cage not quite clean enough or a spilled bucket of water.

He has passed into that ethereal realm presided over by nostalgic bards and copy-hungry newspaper reporters, made obsolete by an antiseptic, stainless steel road show that has scrapped its canvas for the coliseums and arenas of the country.

His job is done, better than he ever could, by an army of clean-cut young men in coverall uniforms who look more like actors from a service station commercial than circus hands.

It's progress, but without the roustabout and the Big Top, the atmosphere's changed.

This doesn't mean the circus is dying, however. According to Hubert Castle, producer of the Shrine Circus playing here today, gross attendance is bigger than ever and still rising.

The Greatest Show on Earth has adapted to the times, that's all.

★

You can take reassurance there's one part of the circus that hasn't changed and likely never will. The performers. Every one of them is still The World's Greatest, The World's Only, The World Champion . . .

They all talk in superlatives.

Little Jimmie Armstrong, for example. At three feet, eleven inches he'll never be a basketball draft choice, but he does very well as a clown.

He doesn't claim any world titles for himself, but he certainly does for his friends.

If he gets the opportunity he'll introduce you to the world's youngest circus band leader (Russ Darr), a drummer (Hap Magrath), who ranks with such jazz greats as W. C. Handy and Satchmo.

One part of the circus hasn't changed and never will: performers

Owner Castle is quick to point out his show has some other world champs, too — Miss Loni of Amsterdam, for example. She's the best lady foot juggler in the world. Or Arturo Segura, a Spaniard from the Canary Islands who happens to be the world champion on the bounding rope.

Little Jimmie Armstrong, 54 and a 35-year veteran of circus life, has worked straight comedy (that's without the clown makeup), stage, television, night clubs and movies.

But he prefers the circus.

covites are a highly appreciative audience, he says, because they are exposed to far less pure entertainment than North Americans.

"They're more like the audiences you would have had in this country in the 1800s."

Castle has had many high spots in his career, but the one that remains highest, he says, is his first appearance at New York's Madison Square Garden. That was in 1939, with Ringling Brothers—Barnum and Bailey.

Castle is still a performer at heart.

"You miss it. I was in it from 1918 to 1963, but there comes a time when you have to face facts."

This is the 12th annual Shrine Circus to come to Victoria.

Circus committee chairman Norman Edmonds says all proceeds after expenses go to support the Shriners' support of orthopedic hospitals for crippled children throughout the continent.

In 1971, he says, the net profit in Victoria was about $6,000 and the Shriners are anticipating about the same this year.

There are 325 members in the city Shrine Club.

Mace Sues City

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Developer J. A. Mace announced today he is taking legal action against Victoria city council over its refusal to "keep the bargain it made with my company a year ago."

Mace said in a press release the action was "regrettable but unavoidable." He added: "I am confident of success."

Today's move by the developer of the controversial Bay Village project follows a decision by city council Tuesday that Mace would have to submit a fresh application for a land-use contract, but with no guarantee of acceptance.

This decision, Mace said today, "merely confirms what I have suspected for some considerable time, namely that the council is not prepared to keep the bargain it made with my company a year ago."

Mace said agreement on a land-use contract was reached last June, when the proposal went to a public hearing and was later approved by council. The present mayor, Peter Pollen, he noted, was one of the aldermen who voted in favor.

Recently council suggested the height of the tower be reduced from 29 to 24 storeys and also proposed reduced density. Mace said he agreed to these provided the changes were made to the original contract.

'Breaks Word, Risks Nothing'

"Council then said that what it wanted me to do was to make a fresh application for a second land-use contract.

"Even that I was prepared to do, provided I had an undertaking from council that either it entered into the second land-use contract with me, or, if it failed to do so, that it would execute the original land-use contract."

However, the press release said, council's recent action means the developer has to make an application for a second contract at his own risk, while the council "breaks its word and risks nothing."

Mace said the "volatile statements" frequently made by Mayor Peter Pollen on the negotiations "clearly manifest an intention on his part to oppose the granting of any application my company might make for the second land-use contract, so that I, having met its demands, am now told to risk everything."

Indicating his confidence of winning a legal suit, Mace concluded: "I am also confident that in due course the community will repudiate municipal politicians who break faith."

In an interview after issuing the statement Mace said he felt it was obvious that "under no circumstances" would Pollen agree to the development going ahead, even with reduced height and density.

Mace said he didn't believe that council's actions and policies should be influenced by one individual.

"Council as a whole should be running the city and not just one man."

Pollen's reaction to the comments today was to say that he couldn't understand how Mace could be so certain of his (Pollen's) personal opposition to the scheme.

"Council as a whole demonstrated a compromising but positive attitude with regard to the Reid Centre and I think we would look at a substantial compromise on Bay Village," Pollen said.

He wished Mace "Lots of luck" with the suit, but said the community should not cower before threats.

MUSIC OFFENDS THE LAW

The season's first flautist pleaded guilty in provincial court today to vagrancy by begging and was sentenced to a nominal one day in jail.

Richard Brian Wilson, 28, of Portland, Ore., was picked up in front of a Douglas Street department store Thursday afternoon, sitting on his jacket and playing the flute.

His hat was on the sidewalk in front of him, and contained $2.65 in coins.

Wilson said he had been in the country nine days, and didn't know street music was against the law. Judge William Ostler told him it wasn't — but begging was.

"There's nothing wrong with playing the flute . . . and you don't look very terrifying to me," the judge said.

The bearded flautist said he had "come up for a couple of weeks . . . maybe to see Long Beach for a few days and dig some clams."

"Isn't it a long way to come for a few clams?" Ostler asked.

"Well, I know a few people in Victoria, too. I have a lady friend here," Wilson said.

"Ah, now we're getting closer to the heart of the matter," Ostler said.

The Crown said Wilson was in Canada illegally, and that immigration authorities would be dealing with him "immediately."

Hellyer Urges Trimming On Welfare, UIC Spending

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Canada should cut back sharply on welfare and unemployment insurance spending, Action Canada national leader Paul Hellyer said in Victoria today.

The government should guarantee jobs to anyone who is employable, Hellyer told a Victoria Chamber of Commerce luncheon in the Empress.

Then the grotesque anomalies in the operation of the Unemployment Insurance Act could be eliminated.

"The present practice of using the fund as supplementary income for highly-paid seasonal workers could be abolished," he said.

"It is stupid when people who have earned $10,000, $15,000 or $20,000 or more in a year can be given a winter bonus paid for in part by hard-working people who have earned far less."

Hellyer repeated his earlier call for compulsory wage and price limits and said it would lead to zero inflation.

A program of guaranteed annual work should replace plans for a guaranteed annual wage for employables on welfare, he said.

If they refuse to work they should then be cut off the welfare rolls, he added.

Unemployables on welfare should continue to receive benefits, however.

Hellyer said Action Canada wanted government curbs on all types of monopoly power, unions and industry both.

Productivity would rise and prices would gradually fall if wages and prices were controlled by government. Increasing costs of providing police, firemen, teachers and other labor-intensive services would be offset by lower costs in highly-efficieint industries producing a net effect of zero inflation.

"There is no alternative to mandatory price and wage guidelines if we are to pursue vigorously and effectively the twin goal of full employment and stable prices at the same time," he said.

"If there is any other solution, I haven't heard of it. Monopoly power, no matter what it is called, has to be restrained.

"Abuse of power by a privileged minority does violence to the principles of a free society."

Hellyer said that due to unemployment, Canada was underproducing by $3 billion to $5 billion a year.

Parks Through Petitions

Acquisition of parkland through local improvement petition is the latest way to create public open space in Saanich.

At its meeting Monday Saanich council is expected to approve a petition by Lipsey-Rolston Development Co. Ltd. for the purchase of a one-acre plot in Northridge subdivision as a public open space.

The land, containing a few trees, has a natural pond on about one third of the area.

Lipsey-Ross, as owner of the property, proposed Saanich buy the land and distribute the cost among new owners of homes now being developed in the 140-lot subdivision.

Safety Stickers On Ambulances

One of the partners operating Garden City Ambulance Ltd. said today two of the three emergency vehicles now have valid safety stickers and the third will have later today.

Neil Leard said the ambulances weren't rejected by the provincial safety inspection station earlier for any condition which made them dangerous to operate but for minor points.

"I agree they should have been through the testing station before. We put it off and it was our fault. But we have always kept the vehicles in good shape," Leard said.

The company is under contract to the city of Victoria for about $60,000 a year to handle emergency calls.

Ald. William Tindall said today he is looking into the matter to see if there are any problems in the service the ambulance firm is delivering the city.

He said there has been no indication of difficulties apart from the safety sticker question. Tindall is chairman of city council's health, social welfare and youth services committee.

In a Twilight World, Only Words of Optimism

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

They exist in a twilight world between life and death, a little girl and a pretty young woman.

They are in prolonged coma, the result of brain damage suffered in widely-separated incidents months ago.

The girl had received serious injuries, although she had not been sexually assaulted.

Since then she has lain in Queen Victoria General Hospital. Although she has shown occasional signs of a return to consciousness, police and doctors agree she has never achieved true awareness.

RCMP still think the most "logical" explanations is that she was struck by a hit-run car, but unless they can interview her, they may never find out.

Everyone knows what happened to Ena Chow, a bright nine-year-old girl who nearly drowned in the new Crystal Pool in Central Park Nov. 30, 1971. But there is some dispute over who was to blame.

Lawyer Brian Roberts has notified the city that the Chow family wants to negotiate a settlement because they feel there was inadequate supervision at the pool when the accident occurred.

He said this week the city has denied responsibility. Negotiations are continuing.

Meanwhile, the little girl and the young woman remain in coma.

Chances of recovery vary with the nature and extent of the cause of coma, a neurosurgeon said.

There are two basic types. In the first, prolonged unconsciousness is caused by damage to the central stem of the brain structure, usually as a result of a blow or disease.

The chances in these cases are better when the brain is damaged by a cut-off in the supply of oxygen by the blood, as is the case in drowning.

Dale

Younger people have a better chance of consciousness and recovery. The prognosis deteriorates as the term of coma lengthens.

But it is important to remain optimistic and be careful of what is said in the hearing of an apparently unconscious patient, the neurosurgeon said.

There have been cases when a patient came out of coma to report hearing and remembering emotionally damaging statements about "human vegetables" made by unthinking hospital staff members, he said.

They don't lose them all. A newspaper carrier boy found unconscious by the side of the highway near the Thetis Lake overpass April 9 recovered from coma and was sent home before the end of the month.

RCMP said Charles Stephen Ferguson, 14, apparently has some sort of block that prevents his remembering what happened to him. Police speculate he was struck by a car, but Charles doesn't remember.

Unfortunately, however total recovery is not always so probable, and death can come years after the initial lapse into unconsciousness.

Dr. Anne Steel hovered between life and death in a seemingly perpetual coma for more than three years before she died in 1959.

She had suffered brain injury in an Okanagan holiday riding accident in 1956, and failed to respond either to surgery or the repeated efforts of a British faith healer.

The neurosurgeon said prospects usually get worse as time goes on unless there is some sign of a return of primitive reflexes. But recovery is possible, and there is always the chance the coma will end — usually with the blurting of swear words or other emotion-charged speech.

In the meantime, he said, the medical people and others around the victim must retain their optimism, because their words just might be getting through to the "unconscious" patient.

Roxburgh Takes Golf Lead; Floyd Only Two Shots Back

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The good news for Doug Roxburgh could turn out to be bad news for golfers who have designs on the British Columbia Amateur championship.

The 21-year-old Marine Drive ace held the whip hand at the halfway point of the provincial tournament after firing a par-matching 70 Thursday at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Placed alongside his opening-round 73, it gave Roxburgh a 36-hole total of 143 and a one-stroke lead over the veteran Johnny Russell of Vancouver's Point Grey club.

Another stroke in arrears were Marine Drive's Harry White, the first-round leader, and Colwood's Ken Who? alias Floyd.

The consistent Russell carved out a second straight 72 over the 6,539-yard, par 35-35—70 Colwood layout that has yet to yield a subpar round to the province's best amateurs after two days of firing.

FLOYD, WHITE TIED

The 25-year-old White rolled in with a 74 Thursday to go with his first-round 71. That put him on even footing with Floyd, the 22-year-old University of Victoria student whose 71 on the second day was topped only by Roxburgh.

A 10-year member at Colwood who holds down a summer-time spot in pro Bill Court's shop, Floyd three-putted the 18th to finish over par and went to work while out-of-towners around the leader board began asking questions about "Ken Who?"

There weren't too many questions asked about Roxburgh. They get to know Canadian junior champions (1968), provincial champions (1969) and anyone who has three - for - three batting average in the Willingdon Cup qualifications, as is the case with Roxburgh.

EAGLE THREE

He started slowly. A double bogey six on the par-four second didn't help but Doug finished the front nine with a one-over 36. Then he came in with a 34, thanks, in part, to a 60-foot wedge shot that produced an eagle three on the par-five 14th.

The 3½ on the back nine and the 73-71 progression might support Roxburgh's suggestion that the cobwebs are coming off.

He displayed a coolness towards his 73 on Wednesday. Not bad, but not what he expected. Still, Roxburgh added, it was an improved performance over the games he played during the previous fortnight.

"I'm not thinking very well on the course," was his analysis. "It may be that the college schedule (on behalf of Oregon) was too much."

After Thursday's round, almost three weeks after leaving the Eugene campus, he admitted to "feeling better" on the course.

That news, of course, isn't the kind of stuff his rivals want to hear as the field turns into the home stretch.

Otherwise, Thursday's interest also was directed at the Hamber Cup competition for teams, and the cutoff figure for the final two rounds.

Only the low 80 scorers, and ties, started today's third round. Only 30, and ties, make it into Saturday's telling round. It took 36-hole totals of 164, or better, to earn a spot in today's field.

MARINE DRIVE WINS

The provincial team championship went to Marine Drive, led by Roxburgh and White. Stephen Barry (75 - 77) and Bing Chew (83-76) contributed the other cards that enabled Marine Drive to take the Hamber Cup with a 599 total, 10 strokes better than Point Grey. Colwood finished third with 614.

With Carl Schwantje (79-75) and Dave Mick (78-75) failing to get untracked, Victoria's ball of hope fell into the unheralded Floyd's lap.

But there were other noteworthy showings by Island players. Cowichan's Martin Holman, 75-73, bounced into contention and a tie for fifth place with McCleery's Bert Ticehurst (72-76) and capable Bob Mitchell of Langara (73-75).

Cedar Hill's Jim Girard also appeared headed for a great rebound after taking 79 blows Wednesday. He was only two over par after 15 holes Thursday, but finished with three straight bogeys and a 75.

But that's how Colwood has been treating the men and the boys. Just when they figure the old monster is rolling over to be tamed, they get set back suddenly by a flick of a branch or the bite of a sand trap.

DUCKING HEAD in battle with bushes, John Hardyment of Vancouver struggles to get solid stance for shot on 18th hole during Thursday's second round of B.C. Amateur golf tournament at Royal Colwood. John managed magnificent recovery from this position and finished with 81 for 36-hole total of 164.

Bert's Torment Returns, And a New Name Appears

Two items from Royal Colwood, the scene this week of the B.C. Men's Amateur golf championships.

The first concerns Bert Ticehurst, a 10-year veteran of Willingdon Cup play, and who is always there or thereabouts in any golf tournament. He is well known.

The second is about Ken Floyd. Who?

And who's Floyd? Actually was the question that some people were asking at the scorer's tent on Thursday. To many it was a brand new name.

The Ticehurst discussion arose because if any top golfer has one inherent weakness that he can't shake, what is it with Ticehurst? Quick to answer the query was tournament director Ben Parsons.

"He shanks," he said simply of one of golf's cardinal sins; "and he's likely to do it at any given time."

Parsons illustrated his lecture with examples from the past, and although he didn't know it at the time, he was setting the stage for what was tantamount to a practical demonstration.

For 40 minutes later, Ticehurst was intercepted as he was playing the 16th hole. And almost the very first thing he said was: "I had a shank back there." If few saw it, it helped put Ticehurst two over par. But it may have shaken him too. For he promptly bogeyed 16, followed with a double bogey on 17, and another bogey on 18.

Floyd? He Was at Work in Pro Shop

It wasn't an impressive performance, and it gave Ticehurst something he didn't want, a nice, fat 76, and a 36-hole total of 148, five big shots behind the leader. Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver earlier had fired a par 70, first of the tournament, to take the lead with a 143.

But if Ticehurst had lapsed, possibly because of a haunting, common error, he was well aware of his problem, and that he would have to live with it, as he has for many years.

In the case of Ken Floyd, it was the other side of the coin. Here was a virtual unknown in provincial golf handing in a card that showed a one-over-par 71, and that score included a three-put green on the 18th for a bogey five.

If people began asking — who was he? and where is he? the answer quickly followed: he's at work — in the pro shop.

And there he was, emptying an ash tray.

"No, I've never won anything big," he said, "except the little old Colwood junior championship."

That was a few years ago, and Floyd, now 22, is a University student, working his way toward a Bachelor of Science degree. And he is working in Pro Bill Court's golf shop to help pay for it. Besides, it gives him more time for golf.

If Thursday's 71 was his best score ever in competition, he once had a 70 in a friendly game, and in practice even shot nine holes in 31.

The Case of the Missing Scorecard

But those didn't count. What almost did two years earlier, was his forgotten run at he City Championships. He shot 72-76—223 then, and was only one stroke behind the winner, Lawrie Kerr, at the finish.

Oddly enough it was the 18th hole then, that proved his undoing. He had a double bogey six, and it cost him the title.

Forthright and a diligent worker, Floyd practices whenever he can, tries to get in at least nine holes a day, plays to a three handicap, which is "almost a two", and he drew a compliment from pro Bill Court:

Well enough, it might be added, that Floyd, starting today's third round, was in third place in the amateur with 145 (he had a 74 on Wednesday), and is only two shots away from the leader, Roxburgh.

A good question, and the answer, strangely, but officially, is: nowhere.

For some inexplicable reason, Floyd's name wasn't listed among the leaders last Monday. Nobody could find his card, it seems. As it was, he had a 74-75—a 149, the same total as Kerr, and a tie for seventh place.

But they won't forget him this week.

They can't.

As for 18, twice a nemesis, he said:

"You know, I still like the hole."

Salmonbellies Drop Burrards

VANCOUVER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies jumped into a tie for first place with Vancouver in the Western Lacrosse Association on Thursday by stomping the Burrards 13-6 before 1,789 fans.

Fred Greenwood, playing his first season with the Salmonbellies, sparked the offence with five goals. Al Lewthwaite added three goals and four assists for New Westminster, winner in its last four games.

Bells Alone on Top

Centre-fielder Don Frampton came up with the right combination Thursday night, unlocking two ties as Bell's Men's Wear nipped Juan de Fuca Sporting Goods 2-1 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League encounter at Heywood Avenue Park.

Frampton's sixth home run of the season snapped a 0-0 deadlock in the top of the sixth inning and helped pave the way for Bells to assume sole possession of first place, breaking a tie for the lead with the losers.

Another bases-empty homer, by first baseman Ron Griffis, provided the lone Juan de Fuca run in the seventh inning.

Combos Lose To Stockers

With two hits on four trips to the plate, Lorna McHattie scored twice and drove in four runs Thursday to pace Stockers North Americans to a narrow 13-12 Victoria Senior Women's Softball League win over Esquimalt Combos at Hyacinth Park.

In the other game, Westendale Constructionettes dropped MacDonald's Furniture, 10-7.

Teamsters Win Again

Esquimalt Teamsters chalked up a seventh straight victory along an unbeaten trail Thursday night by hammering Saanich Charman Pacific Realty 21-6 in a Vancouver Island Intermediate Lacrosse League encounter at Pearkes Arena.

Rick Lapointe paced Esquimalt with five goals and three assists. Basil Rohault, with four goals, and Darrell Deane, with three, were other leading triggermen.

Don Frenette paced Saanich with two goals.

Not Sand or Grass, Just Fear of Name

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "You breeze through the first six holes," said young Jim Wiechers. "You struggle through 10 and then try like the devil to finish."

"It's the sand," complained Gary Player.

"It's the grass," argued Orville Moody.

"The poa annua (a weed) on the greens comes up and bites you," said Chi Chi Rodriguez.

It's none of these things; it's just a case of being afraid of the Pebble Beach course and overly cautious in the opening round of the Open, contended Jack Nicklaus.

"The course is not as tough as the scores indicate," said Nicklaus, the Masters titleholder and prime favorite to rack up the 12th major golf championship of his career. "I think everybody is being very cautious."

SIX AT 71

Tied at 71—the biggest logjam in the opening round since 1896 — with Nicklaus were Orville Moody, Rodriguez, Tom Shaw, Mason Rudolph and Kermit Zarley.

Former winner Gary Player was tied at 72 with a group that included fellow South African Bobby Cole, Don Massengale and Cesar Sanudo. Tom Weiskopf was in another cluster at 73. The ailing defending champion Lee Trevino and former winner Bill Casper were among more than a dozen at 74.

"I feel miserable," said Trevino in a rasping voice. "I shot 74, should have shot 85 and should be in a morgue somewhere."

Second Seattle Group

Seattle Professional Football, a group of area businessmen, will seek a local franchise when the NFL is able to expand, probably in 1974, said spokesman Herman Sarkowsky.

Soccer Rangers Banned

BERN (Reuter) — Glasgow Rangers of Scotland, winners of the European Cup Winners' Cup, have been banned from European Football Union competitions for the next two seasons because of their supporters' misbehavior, it was announced here today.

The committee met in Brussels Thursday to consider a protest by Moscow Dynamo, beaten 3-2 by Rangers in the final in Barcelona May 24. The Russian club has protested because their players were intimidated by Rangers fans, who invaded the pitch.

Union headquarters here announced that the protest was rejected but Glasgow Rangers were excluded from all European Football Union club competition for the seasons 1972-73 and 1973-74.

This means that Rangers will have to forfeit their place in next season's Cup Winners' Cup competition.

Heftiest Salmon Catches Recorded in Local Areas

Southern Vancouver Island salmon fishermen can stick close to nearby waters this weekend — 'cause that's where all the action seems to be.

"Much improved" is the word from Sooke, where salmon catches are averaging 20 pounds in the vicinity of Secretary Island and Otter Point. A few coho also started to show in the latter location on Wednesday.

Best rig for this area right now seems to be two pounds of weight, 150 feet of line and either a large minnow or super-strip.

Denny Ryves topped Becher Bay fishermen with a 38:08-pounder caught Wednesday right in the bay. Others, however, had good luck out toward Beechey Head although action tapered off a little Thursday morning while a pod of 25 to 30 killer whales moved through the area.

Working out of Pedder Bay, Art Archer landed a 35:08-pounder near Church Rock in the afternoon of the same day. Other good returns were reported from Bentinck Island, where successful fishermen have been using one and one-half pounds of weight and about 100 feet of line to reach the hefty springs.

Springs and a few coho are being picked up off Oak Bay, and Trial Island, where Jack Seedhouse landed a 27:08-pound Wednesday, is the most consistant spot.

Salmon fishing is picking up off Coal and Dock Islands near Sidney and Slasher Rock (just off Gabriola Island) waters are yielding some nice catches of jack springs and coho.

"Pretty good" is the report from Deep Cove, where a mixture of coho and springs are coming in from Wain Rock, The Marker and Moses Point. Largest salmon were hauled in with one pound of weight and up to 200 feet of line.

Further south in Saanich Inlet, we find that 125 to 150 feet of wire line and planer are necessary to reach springs in Indian and Coles Bays as well as around Willis Point and McKenzie Bay. There is also a good return of coho, ranging from three to five pounds, along the Bamberton shore.

Stone House and Misery Bay are providing the best action in Finlayson Arm to fishermen using minnows, hootchies or plugs.

Evening is the best time off Courtenay, where springs up to 20 pounds are being boated near Comox Bar and Little River.

Quathiaski Cove and Duncan Bay are yielding springs in the vicinity of Campbell River, but the blues seem to have moved out into the Gulf of Georgia.

Bob's Bat Sings in Rain And Bucs Waltz Into Lead

By The Associated Press

His performance Thursday night helped Pittsburgh waltz back into first place in the National League East.

The beefy first baseman broke out of a wicked slump with three hits and four runs-batted-in as the Pirates grabbed a rain-delayed doubleheader from San Francisco Giants 4-1 and 9-7 and nosed a half-game in front of New York Mets, who were idle.

"One night isn't going to change everything as far as the slump goes," said Robertson, who was hitless in 21 appearances before Thursday's second game. "I haven't had my timing . . . but it's nice to know the fans have been behind me all the way."

KEEPS RALLY ALIVE

After Robertson drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first game, he collected his first hit of the night with a two-run single in the first inning of the nightcap. Then he delivered a run-scoring single in the seventh. Robertson also singled in the third, keeping alive a Pirate rally that scored two runs.

Chicago Cubs defeated San Diego Padres 10-1 in Thursday's only other National League game. In the American League, New York Yankees defeated Chicago White Sox 8-1; Kansas City Royals turned back Boston Red Sox 13-9 and Cleveland Indians topped California Angels 1-0.

The Pirates started the night's work a half-game behind the Mets, but climbed back into first place by percentage points after their first-game victory fashioned on the combined pitching of Nelson Briles and Dave Giusti.

The veteran outfielder ignited a six-run fourth inning with a two-run blast, then launched his 11th homer his next time up in the fifth inning when the Cubs scored three runs.

Bobby Murcer's three-run homer in the third inning sent former team-mate Stan Bahnsen to an early shower and New York went on to an easy victory over Chicago. The Yankees clipped Bahnsen for a single run in the second on the first of two sacrifice flies by Bernie Allen before Murcer chased Bahnsen with his shot in the third inning.

They'll Pamper the Papas

Male skippers of the Victoria Cruising Club will be treated like kings this weekend during the club's Father's Day cruise.

Setting off Saturday, the boats will head for Deer Harbor with the wives picking up the tabs for their husbands at dinner that evening in Deer Harbor Lodge.

This is one of my favorite eating places in the San Juan Islands and I know that the men will be some of the most pampered afloat!

Not to be overlooked, either, is the evening of fun that can always be relied on at the dockside tavern.

Saturday, beginning in Cadboro Bay at 1 p.m., there will be another around-Discovery-Island race, using the reverse handicap system.

Sunday, racing under the International Offshore Rule, keel boats of the area will be racing for the Sir Thomas Lipton Perpetual Trophy.

The race is being organized by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club and one of two courses will be sailed, depending on wind conditions.

The first, beginning at Clover Point, will be sailed off the Victoria coastline, while the other, scheduled to start in Cadboro Bay, would be set in Haro Strait.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

Whichever course is chosen, the race will begin at 10 a.m., the course being posted at the club foreshoreman's office at 8:30 that morning.

In addition to the Lipton trophy for the over-all winner there will be prizes for winners of each of the four divisions.

Two of the club's junior members will be skippering under the University of Victoria's colors at the inter-collegiate sailing championships, to be raced in San Diego June 19 to 23.

Louise Anstey will have Rob Thompson, commodore of the university's sailing club, as her crew, while John Read-shaw's crew will be Dave Hayes.

The only other Canadians racing will be two crews from the University of British Columbia.

They are Pat Finnegan, Phil Leitch, Al Drinkwater and Al Cullen.

Racing will be in Flying Juniors. This should give the Victoria sailors a break as the club uses this particular boat for its junior training program.

Don North's Pegasus was the big winner in Cal 20 competition when the RVYC held another night of series racing Wednesday. After her came Dick Readshaw's Massilia and Mike Fraser's Windless.

In Thunderbirds, it was Don Taylor's Sundance, followed by John Malleson's Sunday, Dave Anstey's Hussy II and Gordie Nickells' Redskin.

Louise Anstey had a good warming-up session for San Diego — she came first in Fireballs and Dennis Woodward won in OK dinghies. First Crown 23 home was Guy Criswick's Warringah.

Members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club will hold their annual 14-mile Musgrave Rockrace on Sunday. Start time is 10:30 a.m. off Patey Rock.

SHORT TACKS — George and Eva Stricker are two of the most envied people in the yachting world this weekend. They fly off to Holland on Tuesday to pick up the ALC 35-footer they ordered in Holland last fall.

To be called the Servus, the Strickers will put her through a shake-down cruise in the North Sea, before heading home. The trip will be a leisurely one with arrival time in Victoria slated for this time next year.

George, who's been sailing off and on ever since he crewed in the German training ketch Nordwind in the 1950s, chose the ALC 35 because of her combined features of fair speed and good handling in offshore conditions.

European. Tough. And beautiful.

Here's the little economy import that's become such a success in Canada. With a sales increase this year of 62% over the same period a year ago.*

Why? Because we built it strong to take on any driving condition. From our hot Canadian summers, to our cold winters. Over all kinds of roads.

And that's the kind of car Canadian drivers wanted.

A tough little car with rack and pinion steering for precise control around corners and through bumper to bumper city traffic. With a 2-litre Overhead Camshaft engine, that's strong and dependable. Coupled to a silk-smooth 4-speed transmission, for swift positive acceleration. With power front disc brakes to let Cortina stop straight and fast—time after time. And it's all standard.

CORTINA

Inside, Cortina's roomy enough for 5 adults to travel in comfort. With a long list of standard features: loop-pile carpeting, electric rear window defroster, heavy duty heater, front and rear grab handles, armrests, cigarette lighter and fully reclining front bucket seats.

If you want more there's an optional automatic transmission and a dealer installed radio. But that's it. We made Cortina complete.

Whether you choose the Cortina 2-door or 4-door sedans, the sporty 2-door GT or the new Cortina 4-door Estate Wagon, you'll find Cortina is fun to drive—beautifully styled—and built to last. It's tough to beat.

Chiropractors, Cannabis Called Harmful by MDs

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Medical Association passed resolutions Thursday against cannabis and against chiropractors.

The resolutions were among about 70 discussed as the association's parliament—the 220-member general council—got down to business sessions after three days of scientific sessions.

During the morning sessions doctors defeated a motion that they should wait until a national committee could complete its study on the second volume of the federal government's commission on non-medical use of drugs. The commission, headed by Toronto law dean Gerald Le Dain, reported on its research into cannabis—the term for the active drug ingredient of marijuana and hashish—in May.

Instead the doctors approved a resolution from the floor that the public should be advised against the use of cannabis because of its serious hazards to health.

The resolution was moved by Dr. Conrad J. Schwarz of Vancouver, chairman of the British Columbia Medical Association's drug committee.

Based on the Le Dain commission's own findings, there is enough scientific evidence to warrant making a stand against use of the drug right now, he said in an interview following the session.

"And anyway doctors could base their decision on the patients (using cannabis) they see in their office—and even on what they see among their own families."

Although the national drug committee appeared to want to wait until they had worded their own motion, chairman Dr. R. M. Lane of Victoria said no member of the committee would criticize discouraging the use of cannabis.

Referring to "chiropractic and other forms of medical quackery," the resolutions call for recommendations to provinces that license chiropractors to re-examine such licensing to protect the public.

A second resolution called for official medical organizations to undertake education programs "to bring the facts about the dangers of medical quackery to the attention of physicians" and to re-affirm that doctors should not refer patients to "individuals who attempt to practise medicine without a basic scientific foundation."

Grit Chief On Spot

WINNIPEG (CP) — Tax lawyer I. H. Asper says his leadership of the Manitoba Liberal party may depend on how he fares personally in a byelection today in the south-central Winnipeg riding of Wolseley.

The 39-year-old leader told the final scheduled news conference of his campaign, "If we lose, I would reassess my position, just as I reassess it every time there is a byelection or any sort of a public contest."

Asper, one of four candidates, said the question of anyone resigning after the byelection should be put to Sidney Spivak, MLA for River Heights and leader of the Conservative opposition in the legislature.

"Will he resign if he loses Wolseley? He is the one who seems to have made it a life and death battle, not I."

Drug Raids Held

EDMONTON (CP) — Eighteen persons were arrested and warrants issued for 48 others in an RCMP-city police drug raid early Thursday following an undercover investigation by two members of the city police narcotics squad.

Police spokesmen said most of those sought probably would be arrested today and the remainder within a week. All those arrested face one or more charges of trafficking either in narcotics or restricted drugs.

Hogmen Feud

RED DEER (CP) — Central Alberta members of the Alberta Hog Producers' Marketing Board Wednesday refused a recommendation that the provincial government be asked to dismiss the board's seven directors and order new elections.

They also refused to ask the government to take control of the board on an interim basis while new election procedures were developed and the board was completely restructured. During an earlier meeting Wednesday, Sten Berg of Ardrossan said a power group among the directors deposed him as chairman of the board. Their "conspiracy to destroy the board" also forced the resignation of Dr. Bruce Jeffrey as general manager.

★ ★ ★

Air Sampled

CALGARY (CP) — An air-quality index has been put into use by the provincial environment department.

Phil Ullman, Southern Alberta pollution engineer, said Wednesday the index measures levels of carbon monoxide, oxidants, dustfall and smoke but is a guide for laymen only with little scientific value.

Funds Channelled

WINNIPEG (CP) — A bill providing for interest earned on lawyers trust accounts to be channelled into the provincial legal aid system has been distributed to members of the Manitoba legislature.

Attorney-General A. H. Mackling told a news conference it is expected about $500,000 a year will flow into financing of the legal aid plan from trust accounts. Budget for the legal aid plan, in its first year, is $1.3 million.

Aid Promised

EDMONTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner, minister in charge of Alberta's Emergency Measures Organization, said Thursday government assistance would be provided families in the flooded Peace River area.

Flooding of the Peace, Wapiti and Little Smoky rivers earlier this week forced many family in Peace River, Grande Prairie and Grande Cache to flee their homes.

Terror Suspect Nabbed in Tokyo Pawnshop

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese police today arrested a young man wanted in connection with the Tel Aviv airport massacre in which 26 persons died and more than 70 were wounded.

Takeo Himori, 24, a former student at a Kyoto university, was arrested in a pawnshop as he claimed a watch he pawned May 22.

The police say Himori is one of five Japanese terrorists who plotted the massacre May 30. Two were killed during the attack, one was captured by the Israelis, and the fifth, Osamu Maruoka, 21, is sought in Japan and Europe.

Police said they will question Himori about an underground Arab guerrilla organization in Japan which Kozo Okamoto, 24, the other captive terrorist, is reported to have described to Israeli authorities. The police said Himori may also have information on the activities of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine in Japan.

Himori left Tokyo for Beirut Sept. 30 with Yasuyuki Yasuda, 25, one of the two terrorists slain at the Tel Aviv airport, and Osamu Yamada, 26, a Kyoto university student who is reported to have drowned in Beirut last January.

Police said Himori returned to Japan Feb. 4 under an assumed name and has been hiding ever since.

The Mystery Of Mao: Dead or Alive

And when he does, his absence usually sparks a spate of rumors that he is dead or dying. He has not appeared publicly since receiving President Nixon at his Peking residence, Feb. 21, and the usual rumors have cropped up.

So what's the matter this time? Is he ill or politically indisposed?

Some reports originating in Hong Kong newspapers earlier this week said he was "seriously ill," so ill, the reports said, that the party Central Committee met in special session to consider the problems of succession.

There are some faint signs that some high-level meeting occurred recently. But there is no hard evidence that Mao is seriously ill, according to diplomatic sources and other analysts specializing in Chinese affairs.

Still, nobody is inclined to rule out completely the possibility that the years finally have caught up with the Chinese leader.

"When a man gets to be 78 years old," one diplomat formerly based in Peking said, "nobody can make any certain statements or predictions about the state of his health, particularly when a government is so secretive about the activities and personal lives of its leaders as China."

The diplomat and others in this listening post have been in contact with their missions in Peking in connection with reports about Mao's alleged failing health and the rumored Central Committee meeting.

All of these diplomats said their colleagues in Peking indicated there was no evidence of any unusual developments that might be connected with Mao's health.

"Our people report that the situation in Peking appears normal and calm," one Western diplomat said.

"If there were any leadership crisis, which you certainly would have if Mao were seriously ill, there would almost certainly be some detectable air of anxiety. There seems to be nothing of this sort detectable in Peking today."

Reports speculating that Mao is seriously ill have made much of two points:

He did not show up for May Day celebrations on May 1 for the first time since 1950.

His wife showed up in Canton on May 1. Some people drew the conclusion that Mao might be in Canton convalescing at a famous mineral hot spring resort area on the outskirts of the South China city.

Until recently Mao's failure to show up on May Day would have been considered unusual. But not since the leadership crisis of last September, when traditional mass rallies and parades were abandoned in favor of smaller, more subdued celebrations.

Mao also did not show up for National Day celebrations last Oct. 1 for the first time, but this had nothing to do with his physical condition.

Hospital Parking Taxable

Two lots leased from the Crown and used by Queen Victoria Hospital for parking purposes are not exempt from municipal property tax, city aldermen decided Thursday.

The hospital had asked for exemption, but the request was refused by the finance committee despite a warning from city manager Bill Hooson that the tax couldn't be collected in any case.

Hooson said that under The Municipal Act all hospital property is exempt from municipal property tax, regardless of the purpose for which it is used.

Ald. Harold Olafson said the tax bill should be sent, regardless of what the act says.

$200 EXTRA HOOK-UP CHARGE FOR BRENTWOOD AREA WATER

Brentwood Water District board has passed a new bylaw which will require subdividers to pay a $200-per-lot charge before water permits are issued.

On single lots the same charge applies, except where the $200 fee has been provided by the subdivier.

Board chairman Victor Dawson explained that the bylaw was enacted because of continuing and future construction in Brentwood, necessitating larger mains and renewal of pipelines.

In addition to the $200 charge, there is a regular connection charge of $150.

Mackasey Blames Reactionaries

OTTAWA (UPI) — The immigration department will dismiss any "reactionary" officials who fail to carry out government immigration policy, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Thursday.

The minister made the remark after detailing for the House of Commons his department's processing of a case in which a Toronto woman committed suicide after her appeal of a deportation order had been turned down. Mackasey later told reporters that some officials are dragging their heels on implementing government policy.

He said government immigration policy is "small-l liberal" and he agreed with it, despite flaws in the Immigration Act which he said he intended to straighten out next fall.

"My problem," Mackasey said, "is reactionary officials who fail to carry out policy and as fast as I find them I'll weed them out of the department."

Mackasey expressed annoyance over two points in the case of Mrs. Alicia Wiercioch, a Polish woman who came to Canada in 1968 on a six-month visitor's visa and killed herself after the immigration appeal board turned down her application to be permitted to stay in Canada.

The first, he said, was that his officials had given him faulty information on the reason she was originally ordered deported.

Mackasey said this had resulted in him telling the House that she had not been ordered deported for taking a job in violation of immigration regulations, when in fact, this was the reason.

Asked whether officials would be investigated and reprimanded for this error, he said: "That's an understatement."

The second point, he said, was that he is irritated with the amount of time it takes to process some cases.

"Four years is a long time," he said in reference to Mrs. Wiercioch's case. "I'm not happy with the time span required to appeal and finally dispose of cases."

When cases take "months and months" to process, he said, "I get the impression that some officials are not enamored with government policy.

"I expect that policy to be carried out and carried out swiftly."

Mackasey said 120,000 persons became landed immigrants in Canada last year, of which 40,000 had made their applications from within the country after they had entered as visitors.

One of the main criticisms of the immigration act has been that once a person gains access to the country, he can often stay for several years while appealing his deportation, even if he would not have been permitted to immigrate in the first place if he had applied from abroad.

Mackasey said this fall he intends to "tighten up" the act with amendments.

PCs Back Socreds' Profit-Sharing Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Social Credit MPs scolded the government in the Commons Thursday for not producing a workers' profit-sharing plan, and got mixed reactions from Conservatives, New Democrats and Liberals.

Charles-Eugene Dionne (SC Kamouraska) proposed a motion calling for government measures to involve workers in profit-sharing and stock purchase plans, "reinforcing our country's economy and ensuring greater co-operation between capital and labor."

It produced a debate on one of a series of days devoted to matters of the opposition's choice. Under House rules, the motion did not come to a vote.

Dionne and fellow Social Crediters said sharing profit would improve productivity through workers' profit motive. It also would reduce labor-management conflict and head off the drift to Marxist revolution.

Conservatives, including Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants), P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North) and J. Angus MacLean (Malpeque), generally supported the idea.

McCleave said United States experience shows profit sharing plans increase company revenue. Rynard said they would redistribute income to the less well-off without the economic distortion of welfare.

Free Outdoor Sunset Concerts Scheduled

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Newest performing arts organization to be incorporated here is the Victoria Summer Festival Society.

It is the brainchild of Maestro Laszlo Gati, who, with four others constitutes, at the moment, its board and membership.

Under its banner a pioneer project will begin in four weeks' time — a series of free outdoor sunset concerts employing the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and some soloists.

An allocation for two free concerts by Victoria Musicians' Association Local 247 through the Music Performance International Trust Fund, is added to these grants making, to date, eight concerts assured.

The hour-long programs will be of a light promenade nature, and will be presented twice on Mondays and Wednesdays in Heritage Court in the Provincial Museum precinct—one program from 6 to 7 p.m. and a different program from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., beginning July 17.

On July 15 and 16 the Trust Fund concerts will be performed.

The first of these will be in Centennial Square at 6 p.m., Saturday, July 15, and the second on July 16 in the Cameron Bandshell at Beacon Hill Park.

These concerts will have as special guest artists Masuko Ushioda, the fantastic young Japanese violinist who won a standing ovation at her appearance with the symphony last season, and her husband, cellist Lawrence Lesser.

They will be on their way to Tokyo and will perform the Brahms double concerto which they will play with the Tokyo Symphony.

The program will also include a Rossini overture, Slavonic Dances by Dvorak and Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

If it rains, the sunset concerts will take place in Christ Church Cathedral.

According to Gati, in the event of further financing becoming available concerts will be extended over a longer period.

CONDUCTOR'S AIM: A SOUL SYMPHONY

DETROIT (AP) — James Frazier, the young black who was guest conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic last fall, is trying to bring soul to the classics and the classics to his soul brothers and sisters.

"West Side Story was a landmark because it brought jazz, real jazz, to the stage," he said. "Hair did the same thing with acid rock."

"In my Twelfth Street, I had to come to grip with a philosophical as well as a musical problem. I want to bring rhythm and blues and gospel music within the formal structure of a symphony. And, I'd like it to be a landmark."

Frazier, 32, who conducted the Detroit Symphony Thursday for the first time since he got rave reviews in the Soviet press for his Leningrad appearance, said a Hollywood studio is interested in his musical and he will spend two months in California soon to work on it.

Frazier, who earned a degree in chemistry but changed his mind about going to medical school, conducted Italy's La Scala Opera after winning first place in the Guido Cantelli international conductors' competition. He conducted orchestras in Detroit, Indianapolis, Los Angeles and Nashville, then was invited by the Soviet government to conduct at Leningrad. He was the youngest American and first black to conduct there.

Sinatra Disappears Again as Probers Wait

BIG MOMENT for Tricia Cox, daughter of President Nixon, came this week as she watched her husband, Edward, receive law degree at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass.

London — Frank Sinatra, still sought by a U.S. congressional crime committee, dropped out of sight again today as mysteriously as he did earlier this month.

Officials at nearby Luton Airport said the singer-actor left there Thursday night aboard an executive jet chartered under an assumed name.

They said they were under orders not to disclose the aircraft's destination.

The London Evening Standard said Sinatra had been in film "The Little Prince" and discussing the part with Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe.

Sinatra flew to London earlier this month ostensibly to discuss the part after failing to appear before the house crime committee about his role as vice-president of the defunct Berkshire Downs race track in Hancock, Mass.

WASHINGTON — Omar N. Bradley, the only living five-star general in the U.S. military service, was saluted in his 80th year Wednesday night by the top brass of civilian and military life, at a dinner at l'Enfant Plaza.

Five hundred of Gen. Bradley's friends and admirers got together and paid $50 each to fete him with military precision drills, speeches, fireworks, letters, cartoons, and the jokes of his old golfing conipanion, comedian Bob Hope.

Guests ranged from New York restaurateur Toots Shor to former secretaries of defence and former chairmen of the joint chiefs of staff, a post Gen. Bradley himself once held.

VIENNA — Iosif Brodsky, 32, a Leningrad Jew who was permitted to leave the Soviet Union for the West last week, said Russian authorities told him to leave all manuscripts behind.

At a meeting at the Austrian Society of Literature, Brodsky said he knows half of his poems by heart and would try to reconstruct the other half.

ATLANTA — A local entomologist has been dispatched to Moscow to get rid of cockroaches in the American Embassy.

Glenn Burkhalter, with the Orkin division of Atlanta-based Rollins, Inc., is travelling at company expense.

"We feel we have a responsibility to help bring peace of mind to our embassy staff members who have been unable to find a way to control the situation," a company spokesman said.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — John Hicks, under indictment for murder, is hiding in a Los Angeles hotel and has been told of the alleged $25,000 underworld price on his head because he knows too much about a scheme to cheat casinos, his attorney said Thursday.

Law officers believed each member of the casino-cheating ring kicked in $1,000 to the kitty, to be paid as a reward to any killer who can get to Hicks.

State and local officers are tracking down members of the ring, which state gambling officials say cheated at least six casinos out of $300,000 to $400,000 in recent months.

HANNOVER — Ulrike Meinhof, the female co-leader of West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang of anarchist terrorists, was arrested today at Hannover airport as she arrived on a flight from West Berlin, police reported.

They said she had a bomb in her cosmetic case and that a sub-machine-gun, three revolvers, several magazines of bullets, and tools and materials for making bombs were in her luggage.

Andreas Baader, the gang's other leader, was captured in Frankfurt two weeks ago.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Pauline Jewett, former vice-president of the Liberal party and now a New Democratic Party member, suggested Thursday that members of the Committee for an Independent Canada should join the NDP.

"I've been working on Walter Gordon for quite a while myself," she told 90 NDP members, in a reference to the honorary chairman of the multi-party organization dedicated to increasing Canadian control over Canadian industry.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Italy maintained its lead Thursday in the World Bridge Olympiad after 21 rounds with a blitz of Turkey while Canada held on to second place.

Japan scored the biggest upset of the day by defeating Australia 20 minus two. Canada retained second place with an easy win over the Netherland Antilles, 20 minus three, and Taiwan defeated the South American champions, Brazil 20-0. Third-place U.S. defeated Britain 20-0.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A state legislator said Thursday the state's budget might be padded by too many bras.

Rep. James L. Wright Jr. filed a protest with the department of property and supplies over the purchase of large quantities of nylon lace brassieres up to size 54D.

According to Wright, a bid for one state hospital housing 500 female patients asked for 360 dozen brassieres, or about 9 per patient.

But he said another institution only asked for three per woman patient.

He said the bid at a third institution asked for nylon lace brassieres padded with "wonderfil spun polyester."

"Should we be purchasing foam-filled lace brassieres?" he asked. "If three per patient is sufficient in one hospital, why are nine needed in another?"

He demanded an immediate investigation.

Fischer 'Mania'

MOSCOW (UPI) — World chess champion Boris Spassky said today his American challenger Bobby Fischer "appears to be suffering from a persecution mania and thinks that Soviet chess players are determined to harm him."

Spassky referred to repeated reports that Fischer allegedly has been accusing the Russians of efforts to prevent him from taking Spassky's world championship and of contriving to hold the championship matches against his will at Reykjavik, Iceland.

"There is nothing to it," the 35-year-old champion said in answers to questions at a news conference," and I am sorry for Fischer, although every man has a right to say what he pleases."

Unlike Fischer who is reported to have boasted he would beat Spassky, the sandy brown-haired, handsome world champion said "I do not know who will win but I am sure it will be an important and interesting event."

The Russian and American champions last played against each other in West Germany in September, 1970, when Spassky won three games and drew two.

Aside from the reference to Fischer's "persecution mania," Spassky refused to be drawn into a verbal slugging match with Fischer and praised the American.

Farmer Prepares For Last Fight With Bulldozers

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The provincial environment ministry is determined to move heavy construction equipment on to the land of farmer John Zaichuk, despite threats by the Zaichuk family to resist entry of the bulldozers physically, if necessary.

The ministry's water resources agency wants to complete work on a water and sewer system along a 150-foot-wide easement on the Zajchuk property, involving a total of 7.5 acres of land. The system is needed for the Erin Mills townsite.

The Zaichuks' opposition is based on the government offering them less than $200 an acre for the easement, while neighbors were paid $3,800 an acre.

Environment Minister James James Auld said Thursday that 90 days have elapsed since an expropriation notice was served on the Zaichuks.

"We'll be going in there and completing the project starting next Monday," he said.

Explaining the discrepancy in the settlements, Auld said when expropriation proceedings began in 1968 many of the 100 landowners affected accepted, but some, including the Zaichuks' neighbors on either side, rejected it as too low.

The neighbors hired lawyers and won out-of-court settlements in the vicinity of $3,800 an acre.

DEVELOPER ALSO PAID

However, Auld said only $200 of the price was paid by the government. He said he understood the balance was paid by the developer, who was anxious for the sewer line to be completed.

Auld said he understands that the ministry's contract with the construction firm building the line includes penalties against the government in the event there is a delay in granting access to the site.

The Zaichuks did not join the initial opposition to the offer because the notice of expropriation was sent to a 20-year-old Toronto address and not forwarded to their home in this community, northwest of the city.

Zaichuk has said he is willing to accept the settlement his neighbors got.

Hylliard Chappell, Liberal MP for Peel South, whose property abuts the Zajchuk land, was one of those who received $3,800 an acre.

Chappell said the Zajchuk land is as valuable as his own, "worth between $12,000 and $15,000 an acre as prime recreational land."

Ulster Catholics Put Pressure On Guerrillas

BELFAST (AP) — A lone force of Irish guerrilla bombers and gunmen was under unprecedented pressure today to lay down its arms and give Northern Ireland a respite from violence.

Two of Ulster's top Roman Catholic politicians joined a swelling peace movement Thursday by urging a truce — "for a day, a week, a year, it doesn't matter how long" — to give British government plans for restoring order a chance to work.

Britain appeared to have snatched the initiative from the guerrilla camp by proposing a far-reaching series of political innovations designed to give the minority Catholics a greater share in governing Northern Ireland.

Talks on the future of a democratic Ulster were proposed, to embrace Protestants and Catholics alike. And the British said they are prepared to hold a plebiscite on whether Northern Ireland should be united with the overwhelmingly Catholic Republic of Ireland in the south.

The move was welcomed by moderates on both sides. The extremists, however, did not seem impressed.

The nationalist provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army, the only Catholic-based guerrilla force now in the field, held a referendum of its own Thursday.

It asked 15,000 Catholics over the age of 16 living in the Bogside and Creggan districts of Londonderry which it rules, the question: "Do you support our three-point peace plan — yes or no?"

Of the 9,000 who voted, the provisionals said today, 7,750 said "Yes" and 1,016 "No."

Nurses Strike N.S. Hospitals

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — About 150 nurses in two Cape Breton hospitals continued to picket the institutions here today following their strike action late Thursday night.

It is believed to be the first legal strike by nurses in Canada.

The nurses, employed at St. Rita Hospital in Sydney and St. Elizabeth's Hospital in nearby North Sydney, both run by the Roman Catholic Church, say they are being discriminated against by being denied job classifications which they say would benefit patients by opening the way for additional staff.

The walkout started after last-ditch negotiations Thursday failed to settle the dispute.

The first indication that the strike was having an effect on patients was when St. Rita officials turned away a man suffering from a crushed hand. He was taken to another Sydney hospital.

A St. Rita spokesman said the hospital's 145 patients will be cared for until "orderly discharge can be arranged."

Mrs. Alice MacKinnon, president of the St. Rita nurses staff association, said the walkout was not a question of money. She said there was no reason why St. Rita nurses should not have all the same benefits as nurses in the City Hospital here.

Mrs. McKinnon said that the nurses feel that since they cannot get parity with nurses at the Victoria General Hospital in Halifax, they should at least be on a par with the staff at the city-operated hospital here.

27 WOLVES BACK MAN'S CLAIM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former junkyard owner who keeps 27 timber wolves in his backyard says the wolf is no threat to man.

John Harris, 35, of Hayward, Calif., says he's trying to save wolf species from further decimation by taking two of his brood, Jetro and Clem, on tours to convince the public that they and other wolves are not as dangerous as they look.

"I am not saying that wolves are gentle as lambs," Harris said. "I know they are not. In the wild they live by killing other animals.

"But they are not the danger to man that they have been represented to be. There has never been a documented instance of a wolf attacking a human on this continent, Red Riding Hood to the contrary."

He was in Los Angeles this week with Jethro and Clem.

Harris said the wolf is being decimated by sheep and cattle interests and market hunters instead of being given its place in nature as a natural predator.

Lecturing and travelling "to educate the people," Harris keeps Jethro and Clem on leashes.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old Nova Scotian who stole a pair of boots while under the influence of an LSD "flashback" was found not guilty of theft in provincial court Thursday.

The charge of theft involving less than $50 was dismissed by Judge William Ostler against Larry E. Gibson, who arrived here from Halifax three days before the June 10 incident.

Gibson had been charged with walking out of Kinney's shoe store, 3651 Douglas, wearing an unpaid-for pair of boots priced at $17.97.

Gibson said he was a former LSD user who was taking Valium tranquilizers to offset the effects of delayed-action "trips." He called as a witness a doctor who had given him a prescription for the tranquilizer earlier on the day of the shoe store incident.

Ostler ruled that although self-induced impairment was no excuse for crime, Gibson's flashback must be considered a withdrawal symptom and thus involuntary.

Richard Lee Bern, 22, of 1083 Redfern, was fined $250 on each of two counts of breaking, entering and theft and was placed on probation for two years.

Bern pleaded guilty to a break-in at a service station in Esquimalt March 24 in which tools and a casette tape recorder worth $160 were taken, and to another March 17 in which a stereo set and 150 records worth a total of $1,050 were stolen.

He was ordered to pay the two $250 fines at the rate of $50 per month.

Marian Elizabeth McClaughry, 20, of 891 Broad, pleaded guilty to setting fire to a pile of tires and was remanded to July 10 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

The tires were damaged in a smokey blaze April 4 at the rear of Francis Batteries and Tires, 2150 Blanshard. Damage was estimated by a fire department witness at about $500.

Four other charges of setting fires in the same week in garbage containers at downtown premises were withdrawn.

Shirley Margaret Lynn Carroll, 19, of 2337 Cadboro Bay Road, was fined $50 for wilfully damaging doors at the home of her former landlady when she appeared in provincial court Wednesday.

An original charge of breaking and entering was withdrawn.

Judge William Ostler also ordered Miss Carroll to pay the complainant $45 to repair the doors. The accused said she had tried to enter the Lewis Street home to get clothing she had left there.

Students of secondary schools throughout British Columbia were recently given the opportunity to express their views on the abuse of drugs and alcohol. This was done through an advertising contest sponsored by the Provincial Government's Council on Drugs, Alcohol and Tobacco. Below is the winning advertisement in the category of drug abuse, as selected by a student panel of judges. A $1000 cash prize, for use by their school, McRoberts Jr. Secondary School, Richmond, was received by Heather Middlemass, Maury Peterman and Christine Middlemass, the team which created the advertisement.

Don't Discard Plant It May Be Slow-Starter

Once in a while we come across a gardener with a wistaria-growing problem.

Though many plants are sold, we rarely see good specimens. This could be explained by the fact that wisteria is a slow starter and some gardeners discard their plant after the first year or so.

The plant is always sold in a container so that its roots are complete. It should be about two years old from either a cutting or a graft, but it may not look much like a climber at this stage.

The first thing to do is to get it planted into the spot chosen for it beforehand. You may want to cover a wooden pole, a metal latticed pillar, a shade-house roof, or to train on a house wall.

* * *

Climbing by twining its stems into ropes, the wistaria will make more rapid early progress if given vertical wire supports, though it may be two or three years before anything extensive is needed.

The kind of soil is not critical. The planting hole needs thorough preparation much the same as for clematis, for the type of growth is similar.

Also similarly to clematis, the wistaria likes shade for the lower stem and root area with the flowering branches trained up into sunshine.

For the first year or so the plant may spend its energies making roots and several short stubby growths at the top of the plant, but no long trailing (or climbing) growths.

This seems like a very slow start, but so long as the leaves come strongly each spring and the plant appears healthy, you don't have to worry.

* * *

Ultimately, a trailing growth begins to grow. Let it go on growing, training it to a wire in the direction you want it.

Spend another year or two training later growths that develop, and cut off any which are not required.

Subsequently, the growths are "stopped" to obtain laterals, and these are spur-pruned to form flowering spurs (like a grapevine or an apple tree).

Once the wistaria begins flowering, the pruning is done by about the end of June with the object of controlling and training new growth and the producing of more spurs.

A wistaria can be planted on the shady side of a fence so that after a few years the sunny side will be draped with vine and flowers for a few weeks each spring. Another similar fence could be planted to a later blooming clematis.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

"If I had my way, I would have children taught bridge as a matter of course, just as they are taught dancing. In the end it will be more useful to them . . . in fact, when all else fails — sports, love, ambition — bridge remains a solace and an entertainment."

Such was the conviction of the late W. Somerset Maugham, England's famous novelist. Mr. Maugham, who died in 1965 at the age of 91, was the author of many universally acclaimed works, including "Of Human Bondage," "The Razor's Edge," and "The Moon and Sixpence."

Maugham was not an expert player, but he was a good one. In his declining years, failing eyesight forced him to give up not only reading, but also his favorite pastime, bridge.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K 9 4
♡ 6 4
◇ 8 7 5 2

WEST
♠ Q J 10 8 6
♡ 8 2
◇ A Q 3

EAST

♡ 9 5
◇ J 10 9

SOUTH
♠ 5
♡ A K Q J 10 7 3
♣ K J

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	1♠	1NT	2♠
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

On West's opening lead of the spade queen, Maugham did not mechanically "cover an honor with an honor" by putting up dummy's king. He played low, and West's queen won the trick. West continued with the spade jack, South ruffing.

It now became a routine matter for Maugham to draw trumps, and cash dummy's clubs. On the third and fourth clubs, South discarded two diamonds. Eventually he lost a diamond trick, thus scoring an over-trick.

Had Maugham put up the board's king of spades on West's opening spade lead, he almost surely would have gone down. East, upon winning with his ace, would have shifted to the diamond jack — and Maugham would have been en route to losing three diamond tricks.

From East's position, he would have perceived the futility of continuing spades, for West, who had made a one-spade overcall on a suit that was lacking the ace and king, certainly possessed five spades. Hence, as East would have viewed the set-up, Maugham had been dealt a singleton spade.

Of course, if East had been clairvoyant, he could have defeated the contract by overtaking his partner's queen with the spade ace at trick one, and shifting to the diamond jack at trick two. In this case, Maugham would have attributed his defeat to circumstances beyond his control.

Andy was waiting for the eight o'clock news. "What's the time?" he asked. "My watch stopped at seven o'clock."

"Just a moment. Mine is exactly right." Joe looked at his own watch. "Okay, the minute hand is right on a minute mark. And the hour hand is just twice as far from the six as the minute hand is from the three on the dial."

You figure it out. But no peeking!

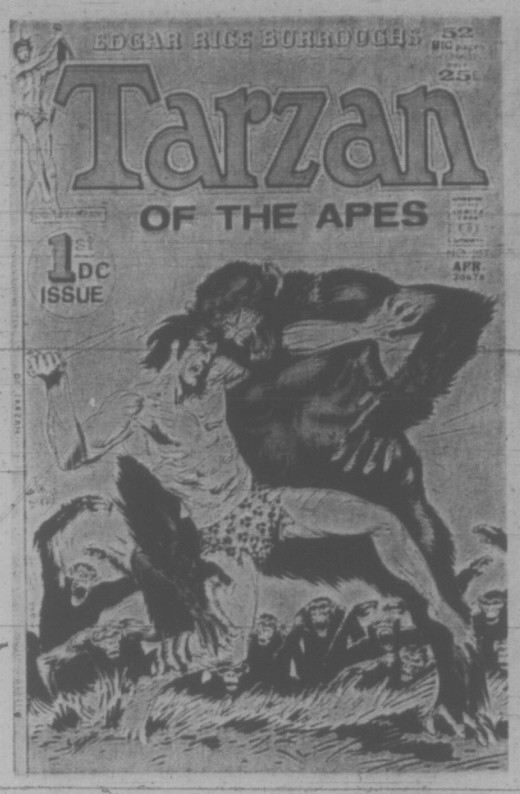
Captain America Still Riding High . . .



Art work on comics now appreciated.

. . . Or Why Batman Traded Robin for Batgirl

Collector Phil Robbie has 8,000 comic books at home.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Phil Robbie loves comic books.

That's why he's got almost 8,000 of them in his home — everything from Superman and Green Arrow to Korak, Son of Tarzan.

Robbie, 20, is one of about 25 men in Victoria whose interest in comic books outlasted their boyhood. He's been collecting comic books for five years, and is the city's principal dealer in this form of literature.

"Comic collecting is the fastest growing hobby in the world today," Robbie said.

Interest in Victoria has outstripped even Vancouver, where there are only about five collectors, he said.

Comic collecting didn't really become popular until the late 1950s, said Robbie, when people began to realize the nostalgia value of Flash Gordon, Batman, and all the others. The fine art work incorporated in some comic books also began to be appreciated.

Besides his private collection, Robbie has about 6,000 comics for sale in a second-hand shop he operates with his partner, Gordon Snowden, on Johnson St.

Every Tuesday and Thursday when new comic books appear on the stands, Robbie adds to his collection. He buys several copies of any comic he thinks will become a collectors' item.

Main collectors' items are the action adventure comics, the muscle-bound superheroes like "Superman, champion of the oppressed, the physical marvel who had sworn to devote his existence to helping those in need!", as his creator, Jerry Siegel, called him.

A few Western comic books, like All-Star Western, are worth collecting, said Robbie. Love comics are worthless, except for one issue of one comic book, which was drawn by Jim Steranko, a particularly fine artist, he said. But Walt Disney comics are good collectors' items, too.

"There's a real Disney cult," he said.

Robbie's comics range in price from 30 cents to $25, but the most valuable comic books — first issues in the 1930s of Batman, Superman, Action Comics, and Detective 27 — are worth up to $300 each.

Most of Victoria's collectors are young men in their early 20s. Senior collector is Wes Vogler, 40, who's been collecting comic books, comic strips, old children's books, old Life magazines, and other periodicals since 1964.

"I took a look at an old Black Hawk cover and I thought, that's fantastic," said Vogler.

Vogler has about 8,000 comic books stored away, gaining in value as they get older. His four favorites are Plastic Man, The World's Finest, Black Hawk, and Strange Adventures.

"The 1930s and 40s were a tremendous comic world," said Vogler. Batman, Flash Gordon, Captain America and all the others were riding high.

Today the quality of stories and drawing is much poorer, he said, and comics don't have the humor they once had.

Vogler, Robbie and a group of other collectors formed a local club about a year ago, but it fizzled out.

"The basic comic collector is a loner," said Vogler. All collectors are connected by a comic collectors' magazine which advertizes old issues wanted or for sale. Vogler sells and buys comics all over the continent.

"I've reached the stage where my collection pays for itself," he said. He doesn't buy many new comics because he thinks today's 25 cent price is too high.

A comic book can last one issue or 300 issues, depending on its popularity, said Robbie. Superman, Batman, now with Batgirl instead of Robin (Robin is apparently attending university) and Tarzan have been going strong since the 1930s.

Most are published every two or three months, the biggest sellers every month, Robbie said. The only comic to come out twice a month was Captain Marvel, the most popular comic book ever, he said.

Vogler's real love is comic strips, the colored funnies that come with newspapers. His collection goes back to the first comic strips, such as Little Nemo, that appeared at the turn of the century.

Early comic strips were printed on sheets of paper about twice the size of today's tabloid size, and the color was far superior to today's comics, said Vogler.

"I just recoil when I see them now," he said. "They're hideous."

MDs Criticize Hospital Bias

MONTREAL (CP) — Medical students would get more experience in doctors' offices in addition to their hospital training under a recommendation passed this week at the Canadian Medical Association annual meeting.

"It's time we got rid of the horizontal complex in medical training — the idea that if a person's not in a hospital bed he's not sick," said one of the speakers from the floor in supporting the resolution.

Dr. R. F. Clarke of Edmonton agreed, saying the education of medical students has been too hospital-oriented and more attention should be given to ambulatory care.

This over-emphasis on hospital care may be one reason for the over-use of hospitals, he said. Young doctors may not know how to treat them anywhere else.

Under the association's recommendation to the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons and the medical colleges, experience in consulting rooms and in "ambulatory care at the community level" would be desirable before certification. The CMA recommendation it not binding on the colleges.

It would mean that a student wishing to go into a specialty such as obstetrics would require experience with a qualified doctor in his office.

All resolutions dealt with during the business session Wednesday arose from the report of the medical education committee. About 200 doctors, voting members of the general council, attended the session.

Also passed was a recommendation approving the principle of "limited licensure" for practicing doctors. Provincial licensing bodies will be asked to limit the licence of a doctor to the specific fields in which he has training.

Dr. R. G. McAuley, chairman of the education committee, said some medical schools now allow a student to prepare for a specialty, such as pediatrics, right from the start without a general practice background.

At present, hospital boards prevent such doctors from performing surgery on adults or from getting involved in areas outside their fields, but "there are no safeguards outside the hospitals."

and possibly in community clinics.

Status Council Urged

REGINA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of University Women is trying to convince the federal government to establish a status of women council, Mrs. J. L. Black, the federation's president, said recently.

Mrs. Black, from Sackville, N.B., said in an interview such a body would act in a consultative, advisory and informative capacity between government and non-government groups concerned with the status of women.

A resolution on the council will be put before the federation's our-day meeting which opens here today, (Thursday), and more than 11,000 members across Canada.

Mrs. Black said the more traditional women's groups do a better job at initiating change than do the younger.

The federation has 122 clubs more radical organizations.

Older women had the experience and patience to think things through.

"I think a lot of the difference is that we believe you have to start with a society as it is to make improvements."

Mrs. Black said women have made strides to improve their status but a great deal still needs to be done.

MUSHROOMING IS BOOMING

GEORGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Max Skrow and his son Ernie were not bragging when they had the phrase "Our business is mushrooming" printed on their calling cards.

The father and son team do grow mushrooms — millions of them annually — and cannot produce enough to meet demand.

"There is always a shortage of mushrooms," said Max. Mushrooms take from 45 to 90 days to mature for picking. They grow in a compost which has been "inoculated" with mushroom spawn.

Mr. Skrow bought the farm, which is about 30 miles west of Toronto, in 1960. They now have about 250,000 square feet under cultivation in five "houses."

Until recently they sold only fresh mushrooms, largely to canneries. But when one of their biggest customers, a major soup company, said it was going to grow its own mushrooms the Skrows decided to build their own cannery.

"We had to find a market for that produce, and I knew right away this was our chance to go into the cannery business," Ernie said.

Setting up their own plant relieved the Skrows of dependency on outside canners.

Now the mushrooms can be picked, cleaned and canned in a matter of hours.

The cannery, which cost $750,000 and employs 20, currently turns out 3,000 cans a day, but Mr. Skrow said the plant has the capacity to triple this.

Vegetarians' Major Need Is Vitamins...

Nutritionist Darla Erhard

There may be few overweight vegetarians around, says research nutritionist Darla Erhard, but that's no reason for complacency about the sudden move among youth towards food fadism and vegetarianism.

Mrs. Erhard, guest speaker on nutrition education for the "now" generation at the Canadian Dietetic Association's annual convention at the Empress Hotel, said in an interview Thursday that the whole concept of vegetarianism can be "quite adequate" as long as its followers are fully aware of their bodies' vitamin needs.

Mrs. Erhard, who has done much of her nutritional research with the counterculture groups of young people in the San Francisco area, says many so-called "vegetarians" are in fact not practising what they think they preach. Her object, as a nutritionist, is to educate the person who wants to be a vegetarian to become a good one.

Vegetarianism is generally categorized into four main types, the first being lacto-ovo-vegetarianism, consisting of an all-vegetable diet, supplemented by milk, cheese and eggs. Mrs. Erhard sees few problems with this type of diet, as it offers a complete protein source.

The second group, lacto-vegetarianism, supplements its vegetable diet with only milk and cheese. Here, says the nutritionist, people must take care to avoid a lack of calcium and iron which the ommission of eggs can cause.

The remaining two groups, the pure vegetarian or vegan and the fruitarian, cause nutritionists greater concern, as plant sources, used exclusively by these groups, are not complete sources of amino acids, essential to good body health. Mrs. Erhard mentioned specifically vitamin B12, for which there is no known plant source.

Absence of vitamin B12 can result in anemia. If its sources are cut off for too long a period, says Mrs. Erhard, irreversible degeneration of the spinal cord would be a consequence. The human body requires only a small daily intake of B12 and a mature adult can store up enough to keep it going for three to five years; after this store has been exhausted, however, spinal deterioration can appear.

It has been roughly estimated that five per cent of the population of the United States currently practise some form of food faddism or vegetarianism. There seems to be an age split, says Mrs. Erhard, between the older generation which tends towards health foods and the youth culture, with its bias towards "natural" food.

Mrs. Erhard says her research for the University of California, Berkeley, has taken her into communes, natural food stores and macrobiotic restaurants. But the visits haven't changed her own philosophy of life.

"I still like my steak," she says.

...For Faddists, Reality

QUEBEC (CP) — People who fall prey to food-fad quacks are usually looking for a way to stay in a dream world and avoid the harsh realities of life, a psychiatrist told the Nutrition Society of Canada this week.

Dr. Robert Buies of the Albert Prevost Institute in Montreal said reliance on pseudo-nutritionists and other quacks is associated with the "primitive anguish" at facing illness, aging and death and the incapacity of science to solve every problem . . .

"Just try to prove to a fanatic food faddist that he is wrong and that he is doing harm to himself and his children. Instead of turning his back to the charlatan who is exploiting him, he will turn against you.

"You are not giving him what he is looking for, that is a solution which maintains a state of dream for power security."

The nutrition society was holding a symposium on food fads at the annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Biological Societies, meeting here this week.

Both Dr. Buies and Dr. D. G. Chapman, director of the Food Advisory Bureau of the federal health department, suggested that education might be the answer to what the symposium agreed are the dangers of food faddism.

But following their speeches, they heard the view challenged by a questioner who said food faddism is showing the public's concern about nutrition and the effectiveness of education about the importance of the subject.

"We have got the information across," he said, "but not in enough detail. A little knowledge has made the public gullible."

Dr. Buies suggested a solution to the food-fad problem may lie in "laws and institutions which could protect the consumer and minimise the action of those fraudulent parasites."

But Dr. Chapman said "the Food and Drug Act can be used to protect most people from food quackery, but it cannot protect those who do not want protection.

Dr. Jean Sabry of the department of family studies at the University of Guelph, said there are several inconsistencies in the thinking of food faddists and the leaders of food cults:

● Faddist writers say chemicals are harmful in foods but at the same time recommend consumption of other chemicals such as magnesium oxide and calcium lactate;

● They say there should be a minimum of food processing but praise the value of dessicated vegetables such as "dessicated carrot tablets;"

● They say meat from animals fed hormones is suspect but fertilized eggs are better than other eggs because they contain hormones.

She also said in an interview after the symposium that it was false "that grapefruit will break down fat and melt it away," or that there are "minus-calorie" foods that "use up more calories in digestion than they supply in energy value."

"One loses weight on these diets only as one reduces one's intake of calories," Dr. Sabry said. "It's not because of anything particular in the diet."

Sound Advice, Girl

DEAR ABBY: My boss is one of those over-40 guys who wants everyone to think he's "with it." He uses jive lingo and talks a lot about "peace" and "love." But when he's put to the test he doesn't come off as very "with it" or full of love.

I asked him if it would be all right if I played my guitar during my lunch hour and he said no. He usually has his lunch sent in and he reads while he's eating. But our offices are separated by a partition and I play an acoustical guitar. He would hardly hear it.

Otherwise, he treats me okay and I really like my job, but I get so bugged every time I think about this I'm tempted to quit and look for another job. — Turned Off By Boss.

DEAR TUNED: Since you like your job and your boss is basically a decent guy, string along with him. His nerves may be tighter strung than your guitar.

DEAR ABBY: Please, please advise brides to sign their notes of thanks properly.

I am a grandmother and sent many wedding presents to unknown children and grandchildren of relatives and old friends. Months later I receive a sweet little note signed "Alice!" — and I haven't the faintest idea who it's from.

Please tell brides to sign their notes with their maiden names, plus the married names. Alice Smith, who married John Jones, should sign her name Alice Smith Jones to all but her most intimate friends. Anyone whom she addresses as Miss or Mrs. should have a full signature. Alice's Mother's Old Friend.

DEAR FRIEND: Done! And while we're on the subject, when acknowledging a gift, not only should the writer clearly identify himself, he should identify the gift. ("Thank you for the lovely back-scratcher, ice bucket, or candle-snuffer.")

Detour to Fort Steele Trip Back Into History

On our way down from Radium to Grand Forks last week, we detoured to see Fort Steele, now being restored to recall conditions and way of life in a frontier mining town, and as the first Northwest Mounted Police post in British Columbia.

It's six years since I last visited this restoration. In that time, much has been changed and many things added.

First, of course, is the new highway approach. No longer do you come in (from Cranbrook) by way of a road memorable for its sharp turns, steep grades and the railway crossing of the old route.

No more do you wind your way down through the trees to a wooden bridge across the Kootenay River (the third built at that point), then up again to level ground, with the big Perry Creek water wheel dominating the scene on the right.

Now you come in over a fairly wide highway, either way, from Cranbrook or from just north of Kimberley. And, if it happens to be from the west, you find the sharp turns, steep grades and the railway crossing of the old route, all eliminated and a brand new bridge crossing the Kootenay River.

Official Entrance

There's an official entrance to the fort now, east of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile. A huge parking lot has been added, also stockade gates. And when you enter, the first place you see, on the right, is the only remaining log building of the original mounted police post.

Straight ahead is Main Street, looking east toward the Rockies and Fisher Peak. At its foot, is the Galbraith Ferry office, that in olden days was also customs and post office.

The Perry Creek water wheel, built to pump water from an underground placer gold mine, moved in decaying sections and rebuilt at Fort Steele in 1965, is now one of the last things you see at the far end of the fort's Riverside Avenue, instead of the first — as back in 1966.

It's an authentic replica of the old Wasa Hotel where "mine host of the olden days," Nels Hanson, welcomed guests with old-world courtesy and where "sumptous spreads" were arranged on high days and holidays.

A main floor houses interesting displays arranged in regional themes to depict the human history of East Kootenay from Indian days to the present. A fret-worked decorated balcony, around all four sides, at second-floor level, has outside stairways leading up to it. On that upper floor, refreshments are served.

Began Ferry Run

History of Fort Steele, originally named Galbraith's Ferry, goes back to 1864 when the rich placer diggings of Wild Horse Creek (flowing into the Kootenay) were discovered.

It was in that year, when prospectors and miners swarmed along the creek, that John Galbraith started to run a ferry across the Kootenay, a venture that remained a family business for 24 years, until the first bridge crossed that river in 1888.

Kootenay district historians Dave Kay and D. A. MacDonald tell us that because access to this isolated corner of the colony was from the United States and miners and supplies were virtually all American, colonial merchants clamored for a British route, British supplies and British administration.

So it was that in August, 1864, Magistrate J. C. Haynes rode into the district to establish the fact that the new gold fields were in British territory and subject to British laws.

Shortly afterward, in early 1865, construction began on the famed Dewdney Trail, a pack route from Fort Hope on the Fraser River to Wild Horse Creek.

Remains of that trail, marked with an historic plaque, can still be seen along the Hope-Penticton Highway.

Grandmother Manned Thompson's Dikes

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — An attractive, brown-eyed, blonde grandmother who admits to being "near 50" has emerged as one of the leaders in the lengthy battle to contain the Thompson River.

Nora Stocks is an alderman and chairman of the public works committee in the district municipality of Brocklehurst, one of the areas most threatened by the river's spring runoff which came within inches of inundating thousands of homes before the crest was reached Wednesday.

During the fight to build up the earthen dikes and contain the river, Mrs. Stocks became a co-ordinator and directed men and heavy equipment to threatened areas along the banks.

She played a major role in the operation of a 24-hour flood emergency headquarters set up in a community hall.

"I've seen floods before," she said.

"Most of the women have given their time and work felt the same as I did — that there's nothing so important as human life.

"Possessions, almost anything can be replaced, even homes, but human life is something that's very valuable to me and I'm sure its very valuable to everybody."

There were no fatalities during the flood crisis.

Exhausted

She said she was in Winnipeg for the floods in 1950 and at Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., in 1951-52.

Like most others on the flood lines, Mrs. Stocks was virtually exhausted when she paused to talk for a few minutes Wednesday.

"After this, I think we can face up to amost anything."

Rev. Richard Hall, one of many who carried food to the weary dike workers, said women from service clubs played a vital role, along with neighborhood mothers who were simply concerned with the welfare of others.

They served long shifts at an around-the-clock Red Cross centre set up to handle evacuations and other emergencies during the time the river climbed to its peak.

The centre handled the evacuation of about 100 families over a 10-day period. About 60 families comprising 250 persons were evacuated June 2 when a dike burst at the Oak Hills residential subdivision.

"A DATSUN SPORTRUCK IN A SPORTS CAR RACE?" We were astounded, to say the least, when Thudley Pierpoint, our intrepid Three Point Motors test driver and trainee ashtray sweeper announced his mind-boggling plans.

"We agree that Datsun's sexy new 92 h.p. pickup truck DOES have the LOOK of a sports car! And driving one, you DO have to keep reminding yourself you're not whipping around in a 240-Z! But Thudley—a SPORTRUCK in the Mosport Can-Am race?"

It just wasn't possible to discourage Thudley. He had a week's vacation coming and was determined to spend it winning a sports car race. He'd ignore our doubts and keep right on talking about the Sportruck's all-synchro four-on-the-floor . . . the overhead-cam engine . . . the room for a four-sleeper slide-in camper . . . the rugged torsion bar front suspension . . .

Finally, just to keep him happy (but mostly just to shut him up) we agreed to let him use Three Point's huge service department and garage to prepare his truck.

But every night, and well into the next morning, he'd be busy in the shop, applying an optional racing stripe here . . . an optional racing mirror there . . . a vinyl roof . . . a walnut steering wheel.

Our customers come first, though so that meant Thudley had to wait around until closing time, long after the last customer's car had been serviced and double-checked. We thought surely he'd be discouraged at that . . . having to work so late at night after a full DAY'S work!

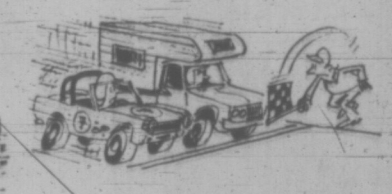
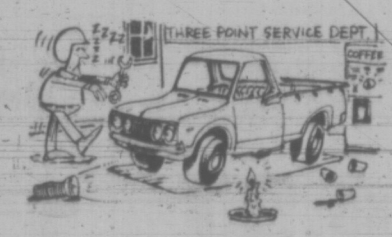
Suddenly one morning, there was no Thudley and no Sportruck tucked away in the corner of the shop behind the high-speed wheel-balancer, Thudley had gone on holiday. Gone racing!

A week later, he was back, full of praise for his Sportruck . . . but somewhat chagrined. He'd been tired already, and by the time he got the wife and kids and all their gear loaded, they were so far behind schedule he had to drive non-stop to get to the race on time.

He was late anyway. But in his dazed condition, he didn't realize it and upon arriving at Mosport, he somehow managed to get the Sportruck onto the track and across the finish line just as the real winner got the checkered flag!





Thinking HE'D won, Thudley rushed to the winner's circle and managed to convince quite a few OTHER people—before his wife arrived and diplomatically unconvinced everyone, including Thudley.

If you'd like to see and test-drive the new DATSUN SPORTRUCK, ask Dave Brown or any of the other friendly Three Point salesmen for a guided tour of Canada's sportiest pickup truck.

Mill Waste: No Solution?

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — Better methods to dispose of lumber mill waste have yet to be devised, Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan told a day-long hearing of the Environment and Land Use Committee here Thursday.

Kiernan chaired the hearing held to discuss Doman Industries Ltd.'s application to use hog fuel to re-claim 80 acres of low marsh land adjacent to Somenos Lake, immediately north of Duncan.

"Obviously we can't afford to shut down the forest industry and we obviously can't allow hog fuel to stack up around our ears," Kiernan told more than 80 persons after he had heard briefs from organizations and individual oral presentations opposing Doman's scheme.

Kiernan, who taped the 4½-hour procedure, said a decision on the application will not be made for some time.

A decision by the committee, which will be made after they hear the tape, read briefs presented and hear Kiernan's opinion, then will go to the cabinet.

TWO-FOLD USE

The purpose of using hog fuel — mill waste which is composed mainly of sawdust and bark — is two-fold, Doman's lawyer Richard Bird, of Duncan, said.

One is to recycle the mill waste and the second is to reclaim the land.

Bird explained that the mill is faced with the problem that if it can't dispose of waste it will be forced to either curtail production or close down.

He claimed that the company is behaving in a "good citizen manner" because it hired experts to advise how the hog fuel could be used on the project and be safe.

Manager of Doman's Ladysmith Forest Products Joseph Frumento told the hearing that if the application is granted it would take care of the mill's wastes for the next two to three years.

He admitted that the company has not investigated other sites because "we were not aware that it would be opposed and cause concern."

OWNERS' RIGHT

Frumento feels that "the owners should have the right to use the land as they wish as long as it is within the regulations of the municipality."

During the hearing Doman's lawyer read an announcement that Doman's will sell the entire waterfront on the southwest side of Somenos Lake and Somenos Creek, which is about 20 acres, to the government at $1 per acre under the new greenbelt legislation, provided the company is able to complete its landfill program on the balance of the property.

Somenos Farm, adjacent to Doman's land, was recently purchased under this legislation as a bird study area.

Kiernan pointed out that opposition to the scheme, "in my opinion," covers about six different matters:

—Will the hog fuel contaminate the water of Somenos Lake and Creek?

—Will it damage the benefits to waterfowl that presently make it their habitat?

—Will it materially detract from the esthetic value of the area?

—Is the end use of the filled land the most desirable use of the area?

—Once the land is filled will it create flooding elsewhere?

—How long will the area accommodate hog fuel from operations and, once used up, where else will they dump it?

Briefs were submitted by the B.C. Wildlife Federation; Canadian Wildlife Service; fish and wildlife branch of the recreation and conservation department; Cowichan Natural History Society and the Cowichan-Malahat branch of SPEC; Central Vancouver Island Health Unit and the Cowichan Bird Society.

RETAIN USE

The briefs all said the land should be retained in its present use. Many people said the land should be purchased by the provincial government and be turned over to the greenbelt.

Lawyer Bird suggested that if the public wants to stop the project there is one thing they can do — "expropriate the land."

Ed Mankelow, of Chemainus, vice-president of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said the matter is a social issue not just a pollution issue.

"What do the people of Duncan want? It is a question of human values," he said. "Do they want marshy land developed or an industrial site in their back yard? The crux of the question is that Doman's will benefit, but will Duncan?"

Mankelow said he is not comforted by Doman's offer of the waterfront property.

"As far as I am concerned I feel it was a wrong move at the time."

W. A. Morris, biologist with the Canadian Wildlife Service, said the service's objection is based upon both the hazard to wildlife from possible contamination of the waters and marshes of Somenos Lake and the physical nature of the landfill operation which would permanently destroy an area of prime waterfowl habitat.

Morris pointed out that there are limited suitable nesting places on the east coast of Vancouver Island.

"This is not just another piece of land — this is a particular one," he said.

CHARGE COULD COME

Morris warned that Doman's will be subject to a chargeable offence under the Migratory Birds Convention Act if the project proved harmful to migratory birds.

Spokesman for SPEC Jim Egan said, "If there is any element of doubt, don't do it. The engineers would have to be God himself to make a statement that no damage will be done. It will be too late later to haul the hog fuel out."

Dr. Peter Reynolds, director of the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, cautioned that more reserach must be done before hog fuel can be readily accepted as landfill.

"To date, our work has shown that, in the presence of air and water, hog fuel does undergo chemical change resulting in offensive breakdown products.

Reynolds said that how harmful leachates, which are often toxic, can be is unknown.

Biologist I. L. Withler, from the fish and wildlife branch, recommended that an alternate refuse disposal site be chosen well away from any useful body of water.

SKAGIT LOGGING HALTED

Resources Minister Ray Williston said Thursday he has ordered a halt to logging operations in the Skagit Valley.

The logging was being done by Alwood Timber Manufacturers with the permission of the B.C. Forest Service.

Williston said he hasn't received a report on how the company managed to start logging on the Skagit. He says the forest service hasn't made any timber sales in that area.

"It wasn't a normal timber sale," Williston said. "He (Alwood Timber) has a licence to cut where he happened to find some hardwood, and he appears to have found some in that area."

Seattle Light and Power has proposed raising the level of the Ross Dam in Washington State, which would flood the Skagit Valley.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Unexplained Death of an Infant

As I have said before, one of the greatest tragedies that can hit a family is to have an apparently healthy infant die suddenly and unexpectedly. Infants who die in this way are usually under six months of age. The typical story is that the baby was put to bed in the evening apparently healthy and happy. A few hours later, or the next morning, he was found dead in his crib.

One of the best things that the grieving members of such a family can do is contact the National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death. Here they can receive sympathetic understanding from other persons who have had to face this shocking situation.

In a letter sent out by Dr. Abraham B. Bergman, president of the NFSID, it was stated that each year some 10,000 thriving, well-cared-for infants die as a result of the sudden infant death syndrome. It is unfortunate that the ignorance about sudden infant death is so widespread, even among doctors. As Dr. Bergman says, "In the vast majority of communities, parents who lose children to SIDS are treated as criminals. . . . Many medical examiners and coroners are still calling the disease suffocation or a variety of other names."

One of the most-difficult problems of losing an infant in this way is that the parents are so often guilt-ridden. They tend to blame themselves severely for the baby's death.

Unfortunately, we physicians do not know definitely what the cause of these deaths is. Autopsies on these babies usually show nothing definite.

In September, 1971, there was an article in Today's Health on these "crib deaths" by Alan Rosenthal. He tells of a number of theories held by various students of the subject.

Some think it is due to a virus. Studies by Dr. J. Bruce Beckwith, of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Centre in Seattle, Wash., show that the "crib deaths" are more common among boys than girls. Also, most of the victims studied were born prematurely or were unusually small at birth. Most of them came from families who were low on the socio-economic scale.

Recently, in that fine British journal Nature, it was reported that a special study of the chromosomes of some "crib death" babies showed some abnormalities that could have caused death. It will be very interesting now to see if this finding can be confirmed by other investigators.

Conn Smythe Likes Odds; Jolts Experts

TORONTO (CP) — Exclaiming "you can't get odds like that at a race track," Conn Smythe confounded the prognosticators Thursday and entered his chestnut colt Fifty Guineas in the 113th running of the Queen's Plate.

Experts had been declaring that Smythe, whose horse was bumped and finished far back in the Plate trials, would pass up the classic this Saturday but the tanned and dapper 77-year-old turned up at the call-over breakfast and snapped:

"You didn't here it from me."

The entry of Fifty Guineas extended the Plate field to 15 and Smythe, who has won North America's oldest continuous sports event twice before, grinned as he won the number one post position in the draw.

John J. Mooney, president of The Jockey Club Limited, owners of Woodbine racetrack where the Plate has been held continuously since 1956, said: "The gross value of the Plate this year is $86,375, of which the winner will receive $56,143.75. This is not a record, although it's very close to one."

The richest Plate was in 1970, when Almoner won $57,395 of the gross purse of $88,300.

Second place this year will pay $17,275 with $8,637.50 for third and $4,318.75 for fourth.

"At this point, you could pick seven or eight horses and base your selection with logic on any one of them.

"I certainly feel you must give consideration to Parkrangle, Gentleman Conn, Victoria Song and, perhaps, Fifty Guineas."

Smythe said it cost him $1,000 to keep Fifty Guineas eligible and with a first prize of $56,000 — "I like the odds. Fifty-six to one. You can't get those odds at a race track."

"I made some money yesterday and I spent it today," Smythe said.

The 56-1 applies only to the owner. The betting odds on the morning line Thursday showed the Smythe horse at 20-1.

Probable post time is 2:15 p.m. Victoria time.

"They're bringing in John Baboolal from Maryland," Mooney said. "This boy did ride Gentleman Conn successfully in his races in the United States. I think he'll get along very well with Gentleman Conn."

The call-over was held in a blustery wind in the walking ring but Mooney said the forecast for Saturday is "sunny and warm — which makes me nervous."

There are two western horses in the field — Madly Magic, owned by R. J. Bennett of Vancouver, son of the premier of British Columbia, and Nice Dancer, owned by Tom Morton of Calgary and Harlequin Stable of Winnipeg.

Madly Magic drew the No. 10 gate and the probable odds are 30-1. Nice Dancer will go from number five position and the odds are listed at 15-1. Neither had been assigned a jockey at call-over time.

Hargreaves Signs For Second Year

NELSON, (CP) — Nelson Maple Leafs of the Western International Hockey League have announced the signing of playing-coach Ted Hargreaves for next season.

It will be the second year with the club for Hargreaves, a former player with Tulsa in the Central League and a former captain of the Canadian national team.

Max Enjoys San Diego's Challenge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Max McNab, head coach and general manager of the Western Hockey League San Diego Gulls, says he was offered a job by a team in the World Hockey Association but turned it down.

While not disclosing which franchise approached him, McNab said, "I told them I felt we had a large enough challenge here. When you've been with something for six years, right from the start, you don't like to leave."

McNab, who said he is continuing his search for someone to replace him as the Gulls' coach, told reporters there were other reasons for him not wanting to switch to the WHA.

Industrial Softball

Eagles scored eight runs in the sixth inning Thursday night en route to a 14-8 Industrial Softball League victory over Langford Drywall at Macdonald Park.

EXPLODING FROM THE TRAP Jack Nicklaus's ball pops toward the fourth green on Pebble Beach to save par during the opening round of the U.S. Open. (See also Page 14). Nicklaus carded a one-under-par 71 as he began his quest for the second championship in golf's grand slam.

Majors' Attendance Up

By The Associated Press

When baseball's major league players conducted their unprecedented strike at the start of the season, there was concern that fans would turn their backs on the game.

Well, they haven't. In fact, attendance is up a bit, a survey by Harry Simmons, an administrative assistant to commissioner Bowie Kuhn, shows.

The results of the survey covering attendance through the first nine weeks of the season offer two basic conclusions: The fans are still coming out to the ballpark but attendance lost by the strike will hurt the owners.

The survey compares playing dates through June 11 of this season with the corresponding number of dates in 1971, eliminating the attendance lost during the strike, which wiped out 84 games.

For those parallel periods, major league attendance increased by 126,867—1.6 per cent —meaning more fans have seen games in person this year since the strike ended than went to the same span of games last year.

But over-all attendance has been hard hit by the strike, the survey shows. Because of the lost playing dates, 1,419,240 fewer fans have been to a game this year.

Even if the 1.6 per cent increase holds for the rest of the season, baseball can expect to have a drop of about 1.2 million for the entire year.

Brenda Newest Threat In Women's Golf Event

Three former winners and a new challenger rank as the major threats to Dale Shaw's hopes of winning the Victoria City women's golf championship for a third straight time.

Margaret Todd of Victoria Golf Club, Joan Lawson of Uplands and Gorge Vale's Shirley Naysmith, who together have accumulated 20 victories in the city event, loom as the major threat's to Miss Shaw's domination.

The low 16 qualifiers from Monday's round advance into match play that winds up with the finale on Friday.

MOTHERS TO PLAY OFFICIALS

Mothers of Players in the American Little League plan to assume a more active role than just warming the bleachers this weekend.

A team of mothers has challenged the managers and coaches to a fund-and-fun-raising baseball game beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday in Allenby Park.

GALLUP REPORT

Few Fans Favor NHL Expansion

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

At the end of another hockey season the big majority of fans report that the expanded NHL is making hockey less enjoyable for them. This attitude is held by a two-to-one ratio over those who find hockey more enjoyable with the larger number of teams involved.

Nationally, 61 per cent of those who describe themselves as fans, find less pleasure with the NHL expansion, while 30 per cent say it is more enjoyable for them. Less than one in ten is undecided.

Interest in hockey runs at about the same level through all age groups under fifty, with younger people more interested than older generations.

Nationally, half the adults say they are hockey fans, with the highest proportion (56 per cent) among those under thirty. Over fifty this ratio drops to 44 per cent.

With further expansion in the NHL planned for coming seasons, Gallup interviewers set out to discover just how the fans were reacting to the situation.

The first question:

"Do you happen to be a hockey fan?"

Here's the response, nationally, and among the main age groups.

	YES	NO
CANADA	50%	50%
18 - 29 years	56	44
30 - 39 years	50	50
40 - 49 years	54	46
50 and over	44	56

Those who claimed they were fans were asked:

"What is your opinion of the expansion of the NHL in which the number of teams has been increased to 14—soon to be 16? Has this made hockey more enjoyable for you, or less?"

	More	Less	Undecided
CANADA	30%	61%	9%
18 - 29 years	31	62	7
30 - 39 years	32	56	12
40 - 49 years	32	61	7

Alberta Schools Obsolete: Brief

EDMONTON (CP) — Existing institutions were blasted as obsolete today in a commission report on the future of education in Alberta which called for more "power to the people."

The report by the commission on educational planning appointed by the provincial government is the product of almost three years of research and public hearings involving more than 5,000 persons.

It urges transformation of the values of all Western society as an instrument to help Albertans choose between a humanist, person-centred society or a "second-phase industrial society."

The bulky, 325-page report makes hundreds of suggestions but limits its formal recommendations for legislative action to 10.

Among recommended changes in education is an increase in the autonomy of the learner, a reduction in the dominance of the teacher and a breaking down in the "preordained" structure of the institution.

It urges formation of a multi-media system to "deliver higher education to people where they want it — and when they want it — in the ways they want it."

PROPOSES ACADEMY

This might be achieved through formation of an "Alberta academy," which would have no campus but would offer higher education to residents through television and radio broadcasts, cable television, correspondence and tape recordings.

"It would also place equal stress on interpersonal communications, including tutorials, group learning, peer learning, community support and social activities."

The report also recommends establishment of a preschool system for children about five years old. School classes would be supplemented by government-sponsored television programming. Participation in classes would be optional.

Alberta currently is the only province in Canada without a government-run network of kindergartens.

Special educational systems would be developed for three and four-year-old children who are handicapped in their development by physical, mental or emotional problems or disadvantaged by culture, geography or economic status.

RECOMMENDS AGENCY

The report recommends formation of a government agency called the Alberta Communications Centre for Educational Systems and Services, which would be known as ACCESS.

The agency would be responsible for a delivery system for computer information networks and radio and television facilities to serve the "Alberta academy," the preschool system, and adult education programs.

It says ACCESS could start operations by 1975 with capital costs of $31 million and annual operating costs of $1.8 million.

The report, prepared by an eight-man board led by Dr. Walter Worth, former dean of education at the University of Alberta, also says the length of all general and most professional programs leading to a university degree can be reduced.

"Education tailors learning to available time instead of making time fit the variables of learning."

For example, BA and B.Sc. degree programs could be completed in three years at the most. Many such programs were increased to four years recently in Alberta. A law degree could be obtained in five years, but the program has been increased to seven years.

The report recommends abolition of Grade 12 departmental examinations.

'SLAVER' NABBED, FREED

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter)— A Fiat Motor Co. foreman kidnapped Wednesday night by a gang claiming to be urban guerrillas was released early today, Argentine police said.

The foreman, Enrique Boggero, was abducted by a gang which alleged he was a "slave driver and an exploiter" at a Fiat factory on the outskirts of Buenos Aires.

There was no immediate word on Boggero's condition or exactly where he was released.

A police spokesman said that an investigation is continuing into who was responsible for the kidnapping.

In April, Aberdan Sallustro, managing director of Fiat's Argentine subsidiary, was shot and killed when police stumbled on a house where he was being held prisoner.

Pipeline Sharing Offered

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of Centennial Natural Gas Pipeline Ltd. said Thursday his company eyes British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority as a customer for natural gas delivered to VancouverIsland and would like the Crown corporation to take 25 per cent of its equity.

Centennial, Hydro and three other companies are rivals for a permit to supply gas to the Island. Centennial alone has proposed acting simply as a gas carrier and leaving the actual distribution of gas to industrial and commercial customers to Hydro.

The five are presenting their schemes to the Public Utilities Commission which has the task of picking the one it thinks best.

On the 17th day of the commission hearing, while Centennial's President Charles Bailey talked about the prospect of Hydro taking the largest single equity holding in centennial and providing leadership for the company, William Mitchell, the energy authority's counsel, was less than eager about the suggested relationship.

Centennial has been financed to this stage in its application by the engineering house of H. A. Simons (International), Ltd. on the assumption that Simons design and overseer construction of the line if Centennial is successful in its bid.

NDP's Barrett Suing Bennett

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Premier W. A. C. Bennett was named today in a libel and slander suit filed by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett in the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

The suit alleges that on June 14 Bennett "falsely and maliciously, by the words used, and by further innuendo," stated that the NDP leader "was responsible" for the assaults on cabinet ministers on June 7 in New Westminster.

Premier Bennett, commenting at a press conference this morning on the possibility that the Barrett action might muzzle him during any election campaign, said: "The premier of British Columbia won't be muzzled by a cry-baby politician like Dave Barrett.

"He is just a cry-baby tryi ngto muzzle the premier during what he thinks will be an election. Such action is unheard of in the parliamentary system."

Asked if he was aware that Barrett had filed a writ bringing a libel and slander action against him, Bennett snapped: "I don't pay any attention to Barrett. He's just a cry-baby.

"This is another reason why he is unfit to be premier of this province. The NDP should get rid of him," Bennett said.

Filing of the writ by Barrett and lawyer Alex Macdonald in the court registry nearly caused an incident. A brief argument between Macdonald and court registrar Tom Halbert dissipated, however.

Macdonald, NDP MLA for Vancouver East, said after the writ was filed that Bennett's statement blaming Barrett for the New Westminster disturbance was more than a blanket charge against union persons or the labor movement.

"Now somebody has been singled out with a very grave charge . . . and we intend to have our day in court."

The writ says that Vancouver lawyer Andrew J. Carmichael will be representing Barrett in the case.

Macdonald said he was acting as counsel for Barrett at the moment and any further involvement by him would depend on his availability and Barrett's wishes.

Here is the text of the writ:

"The plaintiff's (Barrett's) claim is for damages for libel and slander contained in words used, published and broadcast by the defendant on or about the 14th da yof June, 1972, at or about the Legislative Buildings, Victoria, British Columbia, in which tthe defendant falsely and maliciously by the words used, and further by innuendo, stated and implied that the plaintiff was responsible for and a party to the implicated in unlawful assaults and abuse of ministers of the Crown occurring at the city of New Westminster, province of British Columbia, as a result of which the plaintiff has suffered damage both personally and in his office and calling; and for costs."

Barrett first hinted he would sue Bennett Thursday, and later informed news media he was going ahead with the action.

At least one cabinet minister was injured in the New Westminster incident from which the libel action arises. Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford suffered bruises and a cracked collarbone.

New Westminster police said Thursday they were launching charges against an individual who had attacked Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and were considering two more charges of damage to property against other persons.

Barrett later made statements in which he said the incident was a spontaneous act of human nature, but that a climate of frustration and fear created by Premier Bennett had helped precipitate the incident.

Woods, Mill IWA Strike Spreading

Unauthorized but legal strike action by members of the International Woodworkers of America brought most coast forest operations to a halt today as forest workers stayed off the job for the second day.

And union leaders in the deadlocked construction industry dispute are maintaining their staunch opposition to a cabinet order to appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission.

More than 12,500 men — more than a third of the forest industry — were reported off the job at logging and sawmill operations on Vancouver Island, the lower mainland and northern coast forest areas.

Hardest-hit by the walkouts is MacMillan Bloedel, with 5,600 men affected by either strike action or by layoffs due to prolonged wildcat strike activity by fallers.

More than 2,300 men at MB's Port Alberni operations were off the job for the second day along with 1,080 men in logging camps on Vancouver Island. They were joined today by 180 men at a Queen Charlottes logging operation and an undetermined number of men at Kitimat.

MILL CLOSED

Crown Zellerbach Ltd. was brought into the picture today, after being unaffected by walkouts Thursday, when the Fraser Mill operation was shut down, idling 1,100 workers. In addition, 175 loggers at Nitinat and 45 at Kitimat walked out.

Canadian Forest Products camp at Inglewood at the north end of the Island was closed down again today, with 500 men off the job. About 365 men at Squamish and New Westminster closed down operations of Weldwood of Canada. Tahsis Co. employees struck, involving 1,125 men. 470 Rayonier men walked out and 300 men struck Twin River Timber at Terrace.

Nine of the 18 unions in the construction industry, still without contracts with Construction Labor Relations Association, say they will not appear Tuesday when the dispute goes to arbitration.

Flooding Aid Detailed

The B.C. government has established a flood reparations committee and will take immediate action to assist individuals and municipalities whose property has been damaged by flooding, Premier Bennett announced today.

The premier said the B.C. government would pay 50 per cent of the damage costs and the federal government has been asked to pay the remainder.

"The cost of work crews and equipment already used in fighting floods will be considered a part of the provincial contribution," Bennett said. "If that does not make up the 50 per cent, then cash payments will be made.

Bennett also announced that legislation willl be presented at the next session "concerning future flood damage in areas determined to be vulnerable to continued threat.

"It is evident that some individuals and developers have built on lands that are unsuitable because of the danger of flooding. Under the legislation

World Air Strike On for Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian airlines will be grounded Monday when pilots take part in a world-wide one-day strike in protest against air piracy.

The walkout is not directed against any specific government, Capt. Charles Simpson, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association, said today. Nor was it a work stoppage aimed at airlines.

But there is an "immediate and urgent need" for drastic action to ensure strict control of airways, he said.

The 24-hour strike was called by the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations, which represents pilots in 64 countries.

The federation asked United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim Thursday night to seek action by the Security Council against international air hijackings, but a federation spokesman said no action was forthcoming as a result of the meeting.

Simpson said there was "no alternative in the face of international lethargy" but to call a strike.

"Words must now be replaced by action so that once and for all the net closes in on skypirates and those who attack civil aviation."

The strike is scheduled to start around the world at 6 a.m. Greenwich Mean Time (11 p.m. Sunday Pacific Daylight Time).

NEWS BRIEFS

Funds Cut Off

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Subversive Activities Control Board, the source of bitter controversy and political disputes in the United States for more than 20 years, was stripped of all funding by a 42 to 25 Senate vote Thursday.

Medics Strike

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's 100,000 doctors went on a 24-hour strike today, leaving the country's population of 55 million without medical care except for emergencies.

Ports Paralysed

LONDON (AP) — A creeping paralysis hit Britain's ports today with hundreds of ships idle as stevedores walked out in a wildcat dispute over the government's efforts to curb strikes. Nearly 50,000 longshoremen closed down the London, Manchester, Hull, Preston and Liverpool ports by noon today when they walked out in sympathy with three dock leaders facing arrest for defying a court order to halt a dispute over cargo containerization.

Japanese Charged

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Kozo Okamoto, lone survivor of the three-man Japanese suicide squad responsible for the Lod Airport massacre, was indicted today on four charges which carry a theoretical death sentence.

Angered China Rejects Anti-Pollution Draft

STOCKHOLM (CP) China announced today a sweeping rejection of the United Nations environment principles and launched a biting attack against the United States, accusing her of massacring millions of people in Indochina.

Chang Ke, the chief Chinese delegate at the U Nenvior-nment conference, also accused Japan of being a nuclear base and accomplice of U.S. imperialism and charged that New Zealand, which had sought a ban on atmospheric nuclear tests, was sympathetic with the aggression of the super-powers.

The Chinese delegation launched this blockbuster political attack as the conference plenary session began debating the draft declaration on the human environment, a set of guiding principles which China refused to support.

Change Ke said the declaration should have contained China's proposal that the super-powers ban nuclear weapons and pledge never to be the first to use these as well as biological and chemical weapons which the Chinese claim cause world apolution.

Arguing that there is no consensus in the conference for adopting the draft declaration, Change Ke maintained that the working committee which drafted the principles should have been content to report only those measures on which there had been total agreement, leaving other points for continuing negotiations later.

Despite the stormy Chinese statement, conference officials were still confident that the draft declaration would be adopted by the plenary session with criticism noted only as reservations and objections.

But it was clear that all the corridor and back-room attempts by a number of delegations to persuade China to join the UN anti-pollution campaign had failed. Chang Ke said China joins with the common people of the world to fight imperialism and improve the environment. The conference, he said, could rely on the people of the world to stand together.

As the debate continued, there were questions among some conference officials whether in fact some reference to nuclear weapons can still be made in the principles or whether the issue will fiave to be shunted aside and referred to the UN General Assembly.

The over-all set of principles is in effect a sermon to the world that "Thou shalt not pollute thy neighbor."

The Chinese view that the principles, known as the declaration on the human environment, doesn't go far enough was emphasized in an all-night closed-door session of a drafting committee which sought a consensus among delegates that never fully materialized.

GUZZLERS UNIONIZE TO BEAT 'FIZZIES'

SALFORD, England (Reuter) — England's beer drinkers, embittered by changes in their drink and in the pubs where they drink it, are organizing.

An official of Britain's newest union, the campaign for the Revitalization of Ale, said Thursday his group now has 500 members.

The want more of the traditional, cosy pubs instead of "those vast new pubs with their flashy gimmicks" being built by breweries all over England.

And they want to preserve the straight-from-the barrel draught beers that are steadily being replaced by fizzier brews packed under pressure in metal kegs.

S. VIET CIVILIAN TOLL NOW 1.25M

WASHINGTON (WP) — The current North Vietnamese offensive has killed or wounded about 80,000 civilians in South Vietnam to date, according to estimates released Thursday by the senate refugee sub-committee.

The calculation included casualties inflicted by both North Vietnamese and allied forces since the stepped up fighting and bombing began March 30 — the day Hanoi launched its offensive.

The sub-committee estimate indicates that the current fighting is the bloodiest for civilians since the United States entered the war in a major way in 1965.

The sub-committee said the comparable figure for the Tet offensive of 1968 is 62,000 casualties.

The estimates are based on hospital admission figures supplied by the Saigon government on data from hospitals and clinics not covered in t ehSaigon government's survey, and on reports from voluntary agencies in Vietnam.

Adding these estimates to the previous ones made by the sub-committee raises the total of civilian casualties in South Vietnam since 1965 to 1.25 million people, including 380,000 killed, through May, 1972. Here is the sub-committee's year by year estimates of civilian war casualties in South Vietnam:

YEAR	KILLED and WOUNDED	KILLED
1965	100,000	25,000
1966	150,000	50,000

Roustabouts Are Gone But The Circus Still Greatest Show on Earth

By Walter McKinnon

Never again will he strike delicious terror in the hearts of little kids with a satanic stream of invective over some little thing like a cage not quite clean enough or a spilled bucket of water.

He has passed into that ethereal realm presided over by nostalgic bards and copy-hungry newspaper reporters, made obsolete by an antiseptic, stainless steel road show that has scrapped its canvas for the coliseums and arenas of the country.

His job is done, better than he ever could, by an army of clean-cut young men in coverall uniforms who look more like actors from a service station commercial than circus hands.

It's progress, but without the roustabout and the Big Top, the atmosphere's changed.

This doesn't mean the circus is dying, however. According to Hubert Castle, producer of the Shrine Circus playing here today, gross attendance is bigger than ever and still rising.

The Greatest Show on Earth has adapted to the times, that's all.

★

You can take reassurance there's one part of the circus that hasn't changed and likely never will. The performers. Every one of them is still The World's Greatest, The World's Only, The World Champion . . .

They all talk in superlatives.

Little Jimmie Armstrong, for example. At three feet, eleven inches he'll never be a basketball draft choice, but he does very well as a clown.

He doesn't claim any world titles for himself, but he certainly does for his friends.

If he gets the opportunity he'll introduce you to the world's youngest circus band leader (Russ Darr), a drummer (Hap Magrath), who ranks with such jazz greats as W. C. Handy and Satchmo.

One part of the circus hasn't changed and never will: performers

Owner Castle is quick to point out his show has some other world champs, too — Miss Loni of Amsterdam, for example. She's the best lady foot juggler in the world. Or Arturo Segura, a Spaniard from the Canary Islands who happens to be the world champion on the bounding rope.

Little Jimmie Armstrong, 54 and a 35-year veteran of circus life, has worked straight comedy (that's without the clown makeup), stage, television, night clubs and movies.

But he prefers the circus, he says, because there's no director calling his every move. "I can clown the way I feel."

And lately, he says, he's been feeling pretty good. "I just got married last December," he explains. "A little girl about this high (she's three feet, 11 inches too) . . . she's a college girl, an accountant."

Jimmie has only one complaint to air for the little man in a big man's world. "I wish they'd lower those pay telephones . . . I can't reach 'em."

★

Circus owner Castle, who's been in the business since 1918 and performed on the high wire until 1963, made his transition from performer to owner and administrator starting in 1955. His show is now second-largest in North America.

Today his two biggest problems in running such a show are transportation and non-performing crew.

"That's the most dangerous part of our work, too — more people get hurt on the highway between stops than in the ring," he says. And highway transport further complicates circus life, he says, because performers and crew don't get the rest they need driving from location to location.

★

His staff problems are mainly finding and keeping reliable work crews. He gets around that partly by maintaining a core of experieneed men who can direct the more transient bulk of the staff."

Castle, now a young 60, worked as a high-wire artist until just nine years ago and his career was colorful and varied.

For example, he was part of the show television impresario Ed Sullivan took to Moscow a few years ago. Muscovites are a highly appreciative audience, he says, because they are exposed to far less pure entertainment than North Americans.

"They're more like the audiences you would have had in this country in the 1800s."

Castle has had many high spots in his career, but the one that remains highest, he says, is his first appearance at New York's Madison Square Garden. That was in 1939, with Ringling Brothers—Barnum and Bailey.

Castle is still a performer at heart.

"You miss it. I was in it from 1918 to 1963, but there comes a time when you have to face facts."

Circus committee chairman Norman Edmonds says all proceeds after expenses go to support the Shriners' support of orthopedic hospitals for crippled children throughout the continent.

In 1971, he says, the net profit in Victoria was about $6,000 and the Shriners are anticipating about the same this year.

There are 325 members in the city Shrine Club.

Mace Sues City

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Developer J. A. Mace announced today he is taking legal action against Victoria city council over its refusal to "keep the bargain it made with my company a year ago."

Mace said in a press release the action was "regrettable but unavoidable." He added: "I am confident of success."

Today's move by the developer of the controversial Bay Village project follows a decision by city council Tuesday that Mace would have to submit a fresh application for a land-use contract, but with no guarantee of acceptance.

This decision, Mace said today, "merely confirms what I have suspected for some considerable time, namely that the council is not prepared to keep the bargain it made with my company a year ago."

Mace said agreement on a land-use contract was reached last June, when the proposal went to a public hearing and was later approved by council. The present mayor, Peter Pollen, he noted, was one of the aldermen who voted in favor.

Recently council suggested the height of the tower be reduced from 29 to 24 storeys and also proposed reduced density. Mace said he agreed to these provided the changes were made to the original contract.

'Breaks Word, Risks Nothing'

"Council then said that what it wanted me to do was to make a fresh application for a second land-use contract.

"Even that I was prepared to do, provided I had an undertaking from council that either it entered into the second land-use contract with me, or, if it failed to do so, that it would execute the original land-use contract."

However, the press release said, council's recent action means the developer has to make an application for a second contract at his own risk, while the council "breaks its word and risks nothing."

Mace said the "volatile statements" frequently made by Mayor Peter Pollen on the negotiations "clearly manifest an intention on his part to oppose the granting of any application my company might make for the second land-use contract, so that I, having met its demands, am now told to risk everything."

Indicating his confidence of winning a legal suit, Mace concluded: "I am also confident that in due course the community will repudiate municipal politicians who break faith."

In an interview after issuing the statement Mace said he felt it was obvious that "under no circumstances" would Pollen agree to the development going ahead, even with reduced height and density.

Mace said he didn't believe that council's actions and policies should be influenced by one individual.

"Council as a whole should be running the city and not just one man."

Pollen's reaction to the comments today was to say that he couldn't understand how Mace could be so certain of his (Pollen's) personal opposition to the scheme.

"Council as a whole demonstrated a compromising but positive attitude with regard to the Reid Centre and think we would look at a substantial compromise on Bay Village," Pollen said.

He wished Mace "Lots of luck" with the suit, but said the community should not cower before threats.

MUSIC OFFENDS THE LAW

The season's first flautist pleaded guilty in provincial court today to vagrancy by begging and was sentenced to a nominal one day in jail.

Richard Brian Wilson, 28, of Portland, Ore., was picked up in front of a Douglas Street department store Thursday afternoon, sitting on his jacket and playing the flute.

Wilson said he had been in the country nine days, and didn't know street music was against the law. Judge William Ostler told him it wasn't — but begging was.

"There's nothing wrong with playing the flute . . . and you don't look very terrifying to me," the judge said.

The bearded flautist said he had "come up for a couple of weeks . . . maybe to see Long Beach for a few days and dig some clams."

"Isn't it a long way to come for a few clams?" Ostler asked.

"Well, I know a few people in Victoria, too. I have a lady friend here," Wilson said.

"Ah, now we're getting closer to the heart of the matter," Ostler said.

The Crown said Wilson was in Canada illegally, and that immigration authorities would be dealing with him "immediately."

Hellyer Urges Trimming On Welfare, UIC Spending

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Canada should cut back sharply on welfare and unemployment insurance spending, Action Canada national leader Paul Hellyer said in Victoria today.

The government should guarantee jobs to anyone who is employable, Hellyer told a Victoria Chamber of Commerce luncheon in the Empress.

"Then the grotesque anomalies in the operation of the Unemployment Insurance Act could be eliminated.

"The present practice of using the fund as supplementary income for highly-paid seasonal workers could be abolished," he said.

"It is stupid when people who have earned $10,000, $15,000 or $20,000 or more in a year can be given a winter bonus paid for in part by hard-working people who have earned far less."

Hellyer repeated his earlier call for compulsory wage and price limits and said it would lead to zero inflation.

A program of guaranteed annual work should replace plans for a guaranteed annual wage for employables on welfare, he said.

If they refuse to work they should then be cut off the welfare rolls, he added.

Unemployables on welfare should continue to receive benefits, however.

Hellyer said Action Canada wanted government curbs on all types of monopoly power, unions and industry both.

Productivity would rise and prices would gradually fall if wages and prices were controlled by government. Increasing costs of providing police, firemen, teachers and other labor-intensive services would be offset by lower costs in highly-efficieint industries producing a net effect of zero inlation.

"There is no alternative to mandatory price and wage guidelines if we are to pursue vigorously and effectively the twin goal of full employment and stable prices at the same time," he said.

"If there is any other solution, I haven't heard of it. Monopoly power, no matter what it is called, has to be restrained.

"Abuse of power by a privileged minority does violence to the principles of a free society."

Hellyer said that due to unemployment, Canada was underproducing by $3 billion to $5 billion a year.

Parks Through Petitions

Acquisition of parkland through local improvement petition is the latest way to create public open space in Saanich.

At its meeting Monday Saanich council is expected to approve a petition by Lipsey-Rolston Development Co. Ltd. for the purchase of a one-acre plot in Northridge subdivision as a public open space.

The land, containing a few trees, has a natural pond on about one third of the area.

Lipsey-Ross as owner of the buy the land and property proposed Saanich buy the land and distribute the cost among new owners of homes now being developed in the 140-lot subdivision.

Safety Stickers On Ambulances

One of the partners operating Garden City Ambulance Ltd. said today two of the three emergency vehicles now have valid safety stickers and the third will have later today.

Neil Leard said the ambulances weren't rejected by the provincial safety inspection station earlier for any condition which made them dangerous to operate but for minor points.

"I agree they should have been through the testing station before. We put it off and it was our fault. But we have always kept the vehicles in good shape," Leard said.

The company is under contract to the city of Victoria for about $60,000 a year to handle emergency calls.

Ald. William Tindall said today he is looking into the matter to see if there are any problems in the service the ambulance firm is delivering the city.

He said there has been no indication of difficulties apart from the safety sticker question. Tindall is chairman of city council's health, social welfare and youth services committee.

In a Twilight World, Only Words of Optimism

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

They exist in a twilight world between life and death, a little girl and a pretty young woman.

They are in prolonged coma, the result of brain damage suffered in widely-separated incidents months ago.

The girl had received serious injuries, although she had not been sexually assaulted.

Since then, she has lain in Queen Victoria General Hospital. Although she has shown occasional signs of a return to consciousness, police and doctors agree she has never achieved true awareness.

RCMP still think the most "logical" explanations is that she was struck by a hit-run car, but unless they can interview her, they may never find out.

Everyone knows what happened to Ena Chow, a bright nine-year-old girl who nearly drowned in the new Crystal Pool in Central Park Nov. 30, 1971. But there is some dispute over who was to blame.

Lawyer Brian Roberts has notified the city that the Chow family wants to negotiate a settlement because they feel there was inadequate supervision at the pool when the accident occurred.

He said this week the city has denied responsibility. Negotiations are continuing.

Meanwhile, the little girl and the young woman remain in coma.

Chances of recovery vary with the nature and extent of the cause of coma, a neurosurgeon said.

There are two basic types. In the first, prolonged unconsciousness is caused by damage to the central stem of the brain structure, usually as a result of a blow or disease.

The chances in these cases are better when the brain is damaged by a cut-off in the supply of oxygen by the blood, as is the case in drowning.

Younger people have a better chance of consciousness and recovery. The prognosis deteriorates as the term of coma lengthens.

But it is important to remain optimistic and be careful of what is said in the hearing of an apparently unconscious patient, the neurosurgeon said.

There have been cases when a patient came out of coma to report hearing and remembering emotionally damaging statements about "human vegetables" made by unthinking hospital staff members, he said.

They don't lose them all. A newspaper carrier boy found unconscious by the side of the highway near the Thetis Lake overpass April 9 recovered from coma and was sent home before the end of the month.

RCMP said Charles Stephen Ferguson, 14, apparently has some sort of block that prevents his remembering what happened to him. Police speculate he was struck by a car, but Charles doesn't remember.

Unfortunately, however, total recovery is not always so probable, and death can come years after the initial lapse into unconsciousness.

Dr. Anne Steel hovered between life and death in a seemingly perpetual coma for more than three years before she died in 1959.

She had suffered brain injury in an Okanagan holiday riding accident in 1956, and failed to respond either to surgery or the repeated efforts of a British faith healer.

The neurosurgeon said prospects usually get worse as time goes on unless there is some sign of a return of primitive reflexes. But recovery is posible, and there is always the chance the coma will end — usually with the blurting of swear words or other emotion-charged speech.

In the meantime, he said the medical people and others around the victim must retain their optimism, because their words just might be getting through to the "unconscious" patient.

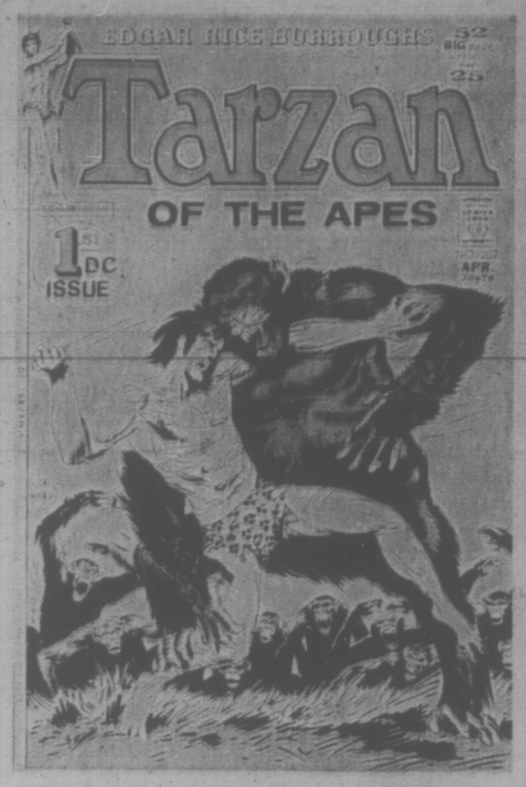
Captain America Still Riding High . . .



Art work on comics now appreciated.

. . . Or Why Batman Traded Robin for Batgirl

Collector Phil Robbie has 8,000 comic books at home.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Phil Robbie loves comic books.

That's why he's got almost 8,000 of them in his home — everything from Superman and Green Arrow to Korak, Son of Tarzan.

Robbie, 20, is one of about 25 men in Victoria whose interest in comic books outlasted their boyhood. He's been collecting comic books for five years, and is the city's principal dealer in this form of literature.

"Comic collecting is the fastest growing hobby in the world today," Robbie said.

Interest in Victoria has outstripped, even Vancouver, where there are only about five collectors, he said.

Comic collecting didn't really become popular until the late 1950s, said Robbie, when people began to realize the nostalgia value of Flash Gordon, Batman, and all the others. The fine art work incorporated in some comic books also began to be appreciated.

Besides his private collection, Robbie has about 6,000 comics for sale in a second-hand shop he operates with his partner, Gordon Snowden, on Johnson St.

Every Tuesday and Thursday when new comic books appear on the stands, Robbie adds to his collection. He buys several copies of any comic he thinks will become a collectors' item.

Main collectors' items are the action adventure comics, the muscle-bound superheroes like "Superman, champion of the oppressed, the physical marvel who had sworn to devote his existence to helping those in need!", as his creator, Jerry Siegel, called him.

A few Western comic books, like All-Star Western, are worth collecting, said Robbie. Love comics are worthless, except for one issue of one comic book, which was drawn by Jim Steranko, a particularly fine artist, he said. But Walt Disney comics are good collectors' items, too.

"There's a real Disney cult," he said.

Robbie's comics range in price from 30 cents to $25, but the most valuable comic books — first issues in the 1930s of Batman, Superman, Action Comics, and Detective 27 — are worth up to $300 each.

Most of Victoria's collectors are young men in their early 20s. Senior collector is Wes Vogler, 40, who's been collecting comic books, comic strips, old children's books, old Life magazines, and other periodicals since 1964.

"I took a look at an old Black Hawk cover and I thought, that's fantastic," said Vogler.

Vogler has about 8,000 comic books stored away, gaining in value as they get older. His four favorites are Plastic Man, The World's Finest, Black Hawk, and Strange Adventures.

"The 1930s and 40s were a tremendous comic world," said Vogler. Batman, Flash Gordon, Captain America and all the others were riding high.

Today the quality of stories and drawing is much poorer, he said, and comics don't have the humor they once had.

Vogler, Robbie and a group of other collectors formed a local club about a year ago, but it fizzled out.

"The basic comic collector is a loner," said Vogler. All collectors are connected by a comic collectors' magazine which advertizes old issues wanted or for sale. Vogler sells and buys comics all over the continent.

"I've reached the stage where my collection pays for itself," he said. He doesn't buy many new comics because he thinks today's 25 cent price is too high.

A comic book can last one issue or 300 issues, depending on its popularity, said Robbie. Superman, Batman, now with Batgirl instead of Robin (Robin is apparently attending university) and Tarzan have been going strong since the 1930s.

Most are published every two or three months, the biggest sellers every month, Robbie said. The only comic to come out twice a month was Captain Marvel, the most popular comic book ever, he said.

Vogler's real love is comic strips, the colored funnies that come with newspapers. His collection goes back to the first comic strips, such as Little Nemo, that appeared at the turn of the century.

Early comic strips were printed on sheets of paper about twice the size of today's tabloid size, and the color was far superior to today's comics, said Vogler.

"I just recoil when I see them now," he said. "They're hideous."

MDs Criticize Hospital Bias

MONTREAL (CP) — Medical students would get more experience in doctors' offices in addition to their hospital training under a recommendation passed this week at the Canadian Medical Association annual meeting.

"It's time we got rid of the horizontal complex in medical training — the idea that if a person's not in a hospital bed he's not sick," said one of the speakers from the floor in supporting the resolution.

Dr. R. F. Clarke of Edmonton agreed, saying the education of medical students has been too hospital-oriented and more attention should be given to ambulatory care.

This over-emphasis on hospital care may be one reason for the over-use of hospitals, he said. Young doctors may not know how to treat them anywhere else.

Under the association's recommendation to the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons and the medical colleges, experience in consulting rooms and in "ambulatory care at the community level" would be desirable before certification. The CMA recommendation it not binding on the colleges.

It would mean that a student wishing to go into a specialty such as obstetrics would require experience with a qualified doctor in his office

All resolutions dealt with during the business session Wednesday arose from the report of the medical education committee. About 200 doctors, voting members of the general council, attended the session.

Also passed was a recommendation approving the principle of "limited licensure" for practicing doctors. Provincial licensing bodies will be asked to limit the licence of a doctor to the specific fields in which he has training.

Dr. R. G. McAuley, chairman of the education committee, said some medical schools now allow a student to prepare for a specialty, such as pediatrics, right from the start without a general practice background.

At present, hospital boards prevent such doctors from performing surgery on adults or from getting involved in areas outside their fields, but "there are no safeguards outside the hospitals."
and possibly in community clinics.

Status Council Urged

REGINA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of University Women is trying to convince the federal government to establish a status of women council, Mrs. J. L. Black, the federation's president, said recently.

Mrs. Black, from Sackville, N.B., said in an interview such a body would act in a consultative, advisory and informative capacity between government and non-government groups concerned with the status of women.

A resolution on the council will be put before the federation's our-day meeting which opens here today. (Thursday). and more than 11,000 members across Canada.

Mrs. Black said the more traditional women's groups do a better job at initiating change than do the younger.

The federation has 122 clubs more radical organizations.

Older women had the experience and patience to think things through.

"I think a lot of the difference is that we believe you have to start with a society as it is to make improvements."

Mrs. Black said women have made strides to improve their status but a great deal still needs to be done.

Detour to Fort Steele Trip Back Into History

On our way down from Radium to Grand Forks last week, we detoured to see Fort Steele, now being restored to recall conditions and way of life in a frontier mining town, and as the first Northwest Mounted Police post in British Columbia.

It's six years since I last visited this restoration. In that time, much has been changed and many things added.

First, of course, is the new highway approach. No longer do you come in (from Cranbrook) by way of a road memorable for its sharp turns, steep grades and the railway crossing of the old route.

No more do you wind your way down through the trees to a wooden bridge across the Kootenay River (the third built at that point), then up again to level ground, with the big Perry Creek water wheel dominating the scene on the right.

Now you come in over a fairly wide highway, either way, from Cranbrook or from just north of Kimberley. And, if it happens to be from the west, you find the sharp turns, steep grades and the railway crossing of the old route, all eliminated and a brand new bridge crossing the Kootenay River.

Official Entrance

There's an official entrance to the fort now, east of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile. A huge parking lot has been added, also stockade gates. And when you enter, the first place you see, on the right, is the only remaining log building of the original mounted police post.

Straight ahead is Main Street, looking east toward the Rockies and Fisher Peak. At its foot, is the Galbraith Ferry office, that in olden days was also customs and post office.

The Perry Creek water wheel, built to pump water from an underground placer gold mine, moved in decaying sections and rebuilt at Fort Steele in 1965, is now one of the last things you see at the far end of the fort's Riverside Avenue, instead of the first — as back in 1966.

It's an authentic replica of the old Wasa Hotel where "mine host of the olden days," Nels Hanson, welcomed guests with old-world courtesy and where "sumptous spreads" were arranged on high days and holidays.

A main floor houses interesting displays arranged in regional themes to depict the human history of East Kootenay from Indian days to the present. A fret-worked decorated balcony, around all four sides, at second-floor level, has outside stairways leading up to it. On that upper floor, refreshments are served.

Began Ferry Run

History of Fort Steele, originally named Galbraith's Ferry, goes back to 1864 when the rich placer diggings of Wild Horse Creek (flowing into the Kootenay) were discovered.

It was in that year, when prospectors and miners swarmed along the creek, that John Galbraith started to run a ferry across the Kootenay, a venture that remained a family business for 24 years, until the first bridge crossed that river in 1888.

Kootenay district historians Dave Kay and D. A. MacDonald tell us that because access to this isolated corner of the colony was from the United States and miners and supplies were virtually all American, colonial merchants clamored for a British route, British supplies and British administration.

So it was that in August, 1864, Magistrate J. C. Haynes rode into the district to establish the fact that the new gold fields were in British territory and subject to British laws.

Shortly afterward, in early 1865, construction began on the famed Dewdney Trail, a pack route from Fort Hope on the Fraser River to Wild Horse Creek.

Remains of that trail, marked with an historic plaque, can still be seen along the Hope-Penticton Highway.

Grandmother Manned Thompson's Dikes

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — An attractive, brown-eyed, blonde grandmother who admits to being "near 50" has emerged as one of the leaders in the lengthy battle to contain the Thompson River.

Nora Stocks is an alderman and chairman of the public works committee in the district municipality of Brocklehurst, one of the areas most threatened by the river's spring runoff which came within inches of inundating thousands of homes before the crest was reached Wednesday.

During the fight to build up the earthen dikes and contain the river, Mrs. Stocks became a co-ordinator and directed men and heavy equipment to threatened areas along the banks.

She played a major role in the operation of a 24-hour flood emergency headquarters set up in a community hall.

"I've seen floods before," she said.

"Most of the women have given their time and work felt the same as I did — that there's nothing so important as human life.

"Possessions, almost anything can be replaced, even homes, but human life is something that's very valuable to me and I'm sure its very valuable to everybody."

There were no fatalities during the flood crisis.

Exhausted

She said she was in Winnipeg for the floods in 1950 and at Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., in 1951-52.

Like most others on the flood lines, Mrs. Stocks was virtually exhausted when she paused to talk for a few minutes Wednesday.

"After this, I think we can face up to amost anything."

Rev. Richard Hall, one of many who carried food to the weary dike workers, said women from service clubs played a vital role, along with neighborhood mothers who were simply concerned with the welfare of others.

They served long shifts at an around-the-clock Red Cross centre set up to handle evacuations and other emergencies during the time the river climbed to its peak.

The centre handled the evacuation of about 100 families over a 10-day period. About 60 families comprising 250 persons were evacuated June 2 when a dike burst at the Oak Hills residential subdivision.

The Canadian Wildlife Service has published an impressive number of folders in a series called Hinterland Who's Who. Most of these have a cover photo of the animal they describe.

1. The Moose, the largest member of the deer family.

2. The White-tailed Deer, the most widely distributed and most numerous North American big game animal.

3. The Beaver, which has been adopted as our national symbol on stamps, coins and emblems.

4. The Skunk, one of the most useful small mammals.

5. The Red Fox, which can be found all across Canada.

6. The Mountain Sheep, recognizable by the massive curled horns of their males.

"A DATSUN SPORTRUCK IN A SPORTS CAR RACE?" We were astounded, to say the least, when Thudley Pierpoint, our intrepid Three Point Motors test driver and trainee ashtray sweeper announced his mind-boggling plans.

"We agree that Datsun's sexy new 92 h.p. pickup truck DOES have the LOOK of a sports car! And driving one, you DO have to keep reminding yourself you're not whipping around in a 240-Z! But Thudley—a SPORTRUCK in the Mosport Can-Am race?"

It just wasn't possible to discourage Thudley. He had a week's vacation coming and was determined to spend it winning a sports car race. He'd ignore our doubts and keep right on talking about the Sportruck's all-synchro four-on-the-floor . . . the overhead-cam engine . . . the room for a four-sleeper slide-in camper . . . the rugged torsion bar front suspension . . .

Finally, just to keep him happy (but mostly just to shut him up) we agreed to let him use Three Point's huge service department and garage to prepare his truck.

But every night, and well into the next morning, he'd be busy in the shop, applying an optional racing stripe here . . . an optional racing mirror there . . . a vinyl roof . . . a walnut steering wheel.

Our customers come first, though so that meant Thudley had to wait around until closing time, long after the last customer's car had been serviced and double-checked. We thought surely he'd be discouraged at that . . . having to work so late at night after a full DAY'S work!

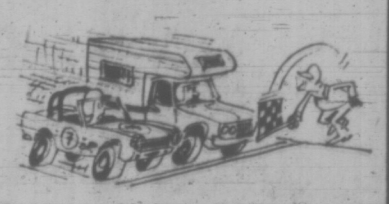
Suddenly one morning, there was no Thudley and no Sportruck tucked away in the corner of the shop behind the high-speed wheel-balancer. Thudley had gone on holiday. Gone racing!

A week later, he was back, full of praise for his Sportruck . . . but somewhat chagrined. He'd been tired already, and by the time he got the wife and kids and all their gear loaded, they were so far behind schedule he had to drive non-stop to get to the race on time.

He was late anyway. But in his dazed condition, he didn't realize it and upon arriving at Mosport, he somehow managed to get the Sportruck onto the track and across the finish line just as the real winner got the checkered flag!



Thinking HE'D won, Thudley rushed to the winner's circle and managed to convince quite a few OTHER people—before his wife arrived and diplomatically unconvinced everyone, including Thudley.

If you'd like to see and test-drive the new DATSUN SPORTRUCK, ask Dave Brown or any of the other friendly Three Point salesmen for a guided tour of Canada's sportiest pickup truck.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hold off on journey, if practical. Steer clear of disputes with relatives, neighbors. Finish tasks. Putting things off now would be error. Message may be more serious than at first anticipated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friend offers practical advice about money. You will get nothing for nothing. Know it and act accordingly. You may feel as if you are pulled in two directions simultaneously. Be cautious, patient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotional distress is but temporary. Know it, and refuse to be sidetracked from main objective. Experiment. Spread wings. Take chance on own abilities. There is room for you at higher level. Move!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is pressure in legal area. Key is to bide for time. Examine in diplomatic way. Family member can now prove wonderful ally. Achievement is probably — but get green light from authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): You can deliberate and come up with right decision. Pisces is in picture. You look beyond; you perceive and detect. You learn, teach and travel. You come out of yourself. You are alive, ready and vital.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What appears minor should be taken seriously. One you take for granted is thinking of making a change. Evaluate your needs. Don't throw away something of value. Check financial possibilities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Contract is considered, discussed. Special agreement is on agenda. Marriage and partnership are spotlighted. Aries is likely to be involved. Finish rather than start—round out desires, ambitions.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are foxy, versatile, able to bring order out of apparent confusion. You are making adjustments in domestic area and could move in September. You harmonize with Leo, Aries Libra and Aquarius. You could get inextricably involved with Sagittarius and are fascinated by Capricorn.

Conn Smythe Likes Odds; Jolts Experts

TORONTO (CP) — Exclaiming "you can't get odds like that at a race track," Conn Smythe confounded the prognosticators Thursday and entered his chestnut colt Fifty Guineas in the 113th running of the Queen's Plate.

Experts had been declaring that Smythe, whose horse was bumped and finished far back in the Plate trials, would pass up the classic this Saturday but the tanned and dapper 77-year-old turned up at the call-over breakfast and snapped:

"You didn't here it from me."

The entry of Fifty Guineas extended the Plate field to 15 and Smythe, who has won North America's oldest continuous sports event twice before, grinned as he won the number one post position in the draw.

John J. Mooney, president of The Jockey Club Limited, owners of Woodbine racetrack where the Plate has been held continuously since 1956, said: "The gross value of the Plate this year is $86,375, of which the winner will receive $56,143.75. This is not a record, although it's very close to one."

The richest Plate was in 1970, when Almoner won $57,395 of the gross purse of $88,300.

Second place this year will pay $17,275 with $8,637.50 for third and $4,818.75 for fourth.

"At this point, you could pick seven or eight horses and base your selection with logic on any one of them.

"I certainly feel you must give consideration to Parkrangie, Gentleman Conn, Victoria Song and, perhaps, Fifty Guineas."

Smythe said it cost him $1,000 to keep Fifty Guineas eligible and with a first prize of $56,000 — "I like the odds. Fifty-six to one. You can't get those odds at a race track."

"I made some money yesterday and I spent it today," Smythe said.

The 56-1 applies only to the owner. The betting odds on the morning line Thursday showed the Smythe horse at 20-1.

Probable post time is 2:15 p.m. Victoria time.

"They're bringing in John Baboolal from Maryland," Mooney said. "This boy did ride Gentleman Conn successfully in his races in the United States. I think he'll get along very well with Gentleman Conn."

The call-over was held in a blustery wind in the walking ring but Mooney said the forecast for Saturday is "sunny and warm — which makes me nervous."

There are two western horses in the field — Madly Magic, owned by R. J. Bennett of Vancouver, son of the premier of British Columbia, and Nice Dancer, owned by Tom Morton of Calgary and Harlequin Stable of Winnipeg.

Madly Magic drew the No. 10 gate and the probable odds are 30-1. Nice Dancer will go from number five position and the odds are listed at 15-1. Neither had been assigned a jockey at call-over time.

Max Enjoys San Diego's Challenge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Max McNab, head coach and general manager of the Western Hockey League San Diego Gulls, says he was offered a job by a team in the World Hockey Association but turned it down.

While not disclosing which franchise approached him, McNab said, "I told them I felt we had a large enough challenge here. When you've been with something for six years, right from the start, you don't like to leave."

McNab, who said he is continuing his search for someone to replace him as the Gulls' coach, told reporters there were other reasons for him not wanting to switch to the WHA.

"I'm not 100 per cent sold on the future of the World Hockey Association," he said. "There are too many question marks."

Phil Goyette Ponders Bid

MONTREAL (CP) — Phil Goyette, a former smooth-skating centre with four National Hockey League clubs, said Thursday he will reach a decision soon whether or not to accept the coaching job with the World Hockey Association's Les Nordiques of Quebec City.

Goyette, 38, retired from Buffalo Sabres Dec. 31, 1971, but returned to the NHL in mid-March when his contract was purchased by New York Rangers. He replaced centre Jean Ratelle who had fractured an ankle.

"The NHL has been good to me," Goyette said. "So I waited through the NHL meetings (last week) to see how I stood with New York and also to see if anybody would approach me about a job."

Hargreaves Signs For Second Year

NELSON, (CP) — Nelson Maple Leafs of the Western International Hockey League have announced the signing of playing-coach Ted Hargreaves for next season.

It will be the second year with the club for Hargreaves, a former player with Tulsa in the Central League and a former captain of the Canadian national team.

Paduano Pounded

MONTREAL (CP) — Reynald Cantin abandoned his approach as a slugger, became a crowder, and upset Montreal's Donato Paduano in a 12-round bout before 6,010 Forum fans Thursday night.

He crowded Paduano, head on his opponent's chest, and did not allow him to use his fast hands from the outside.

Bruce Takes Denver Offer

PENTICTON (CP) — Defenceman Bruce Affleck, 18, the most valuable player in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League last season, said Thursday he has accepted a four-year athletic scholarship at the University of Denver.

Affleck, who played for the Penticton Broncos, said he chose the university offer over the Western Canada Hockey League because he is not yet sure whether he wants to make hockey a career.

Majors' Attendance Up

By The Associated Press

When baseball's major league players conducted their unprecedented strike at the start of the season, there was concern that fans would turn their backs on the game.

Well, they haven't. In fact, attendance is up a bit, a survey by Harry Simmons, an administrative assistant to commissioner Bowie Kuhn, shows.

The results of the survey covering attendance through the first nine weeks of the season offer two basic conclusions: The fans are still coming out to the ballpark but attendance lost by the strike will hurt the owners.

The survey compares playing dates through June 11 of this season with the corresponding number of dates in 1971, eliminating the attendance lost during the strike, which wiped out 84 games.

For those parallel periods, major league attendance increased by 126,867—1.6 per cent—meaning more fans have seen games in person this year since the strike ended than went to the same span of games last year.

But over-all attendance has been hard hit by the strike, the survey shows. Because of the lost playing dates, 1,419,240 fewer fans have been to a game this year.

Even if the 1.6 per cent increase holds for the rest of the season, baseball can expect to have a drop of about 1.2 million for the entire year.

Brenda Newest Threat In Women's Golf Event

Three former winners and a new challenger rank as the major threats to Dale Shaw's hopes of winning the Victoria City women's golf championship for a third straight time.

Margaret Todd of Victoria Golf Club, Joan Lawson of Uplands and Gorge Vale's Shirley Naysmith, who together have accumulated 20 victories in the city event, loom as the major threat's to Miss Shaw's domination.

The low 16 qualifiers from Monday's round advance into match play that winds up with the finale on Friday.

Monday's draw:

	P	W	L	T	F	A	Pts.
Burnaby	9	6	3	0	106	101	12
VICTORIA	10	5	4	1	103	99	11
Richmond	7	4	3	0	92	86	8
Coquitlam	8	3	4	1	94	99	7
Surrey	8	2	6	0	94	106	4

Next game: Saturday—VICTORIA at Richmond.

GALLUP REPORT

Few Fans Favor NHL Expansion

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

At the end of another hockey season the big majority of fans report that the expanded NHL is making hockey less enjoyable for them. This attitude is held by a two-to-one ratio over those who find hockey more enjoyable with the larger number of teams involved.

Nationally, 61 per cent of those who describe themselves as fans, find less pleasure with the NHL expansion, while 30 per cent say it is more enjoyable for them. Less than one in ten is undecided.

Interest in hockey runs at about the same level through all age groups under fifty, with younger people more interested than older generations.

Nationally, half the adults say they are hockey fans, with the highest proportion (56 per cent) among those under thirty. Over fifty this ratio drops to 44 per cent.

With further expansion in the NHL planned for coming seasons, Gallup interviewers set out to discover just how the fans were reacting to the situation.

The first question:

"Do you happen to be a hockey fan?"

Here's the response, nationally, and among the main age groups.

	YES	NO
CANADA	50%	50%
18 - 29 years	56	44
30 - 39 years	50	50
40 - 49 years	54	46
50 and over	44	56

Those who claimed they were fans were asked:

"What is your opinion of the expansion of the NHL in which the number of teams has been increased to 14—soon to be 16? Has this made hockey more enjoyable for you, or less?"

	More	Less	Undecided
CANADA	30%	61%	9%

Detour to Fort Steele Trip Back Into History

On our way down from Radium to Grand Forks last week, we detoured to see Fort Steele, now being restored to recall conditions and way of life in a frontier mining town, and as the first Northwest Mounted Police post in British Columbia.

It's six years since I last visited this restoration. In that time, much has been changed and many things added.

First, of course, is the new highway approach. No longer do you come in (from Cranbrook) by way of a road memorable for its sharp turns, steep grades and the railway crossing of the old route.

No more do you wind your way down through the trees to a wooden bridge across the Kootenay River (the third built at that point), then up again to level ground, with the big Perry Creek water wheel dominating the scene on the right.

Now you come in over a fairly wide highway, either way, from Cranbrook or from just north of Kimberley. And, if it happens to be from the west, you find the sharp turns, steep grades and the railway crossing of the old route, all eliminated and a brand new bridge crossing the Kootenay River.

Official Entrance

There's an official entrance to the fort now, east of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile. A huge parking lot has been added, also stockade gates. And when you enter, the first place you see, on the right, is the only remaining log building of the original mounted police post.

Straight ahead is Main Street, looking east toward the Rockies and Fisher Peak. At its foot, is the Galbraith Ferry office, that in olden days was also customs and post office.

The Perry Creek water wheel, built to pump water from an underground placer gold mine, moved in decaying sections and rebuilt at Fort Steele in 1965, is now one of the last things you see at the far end of the fort's Riverside Avenue, instead of the first — as back in 1966.

It's an authentic replica of the old Wasa Hotel where "mine host of the olden days," Nels Hanson, welcomed guests with old-world courtesy and where "sumptous spreads" were arranged on high days and holidays.

A main floor houses interesting displays arranged in regional themes to depict the human history of East Kootenay from Indian days to the present. A fret-worked decorated balcony, around all four sides, at second-floor level, has outside stairways leading up to it. On that upper floor, refreshments are served.

Began Ferry Run

History of Fort Steele, originally named Galbraith's Ferry, goes back to 1864 when the rich placer diggings of Wild Horse Creek (flowing into the Kootenay) were discovered.

It was in that year, when prospectors and miners swarmed along the creek, that John Galbraith started to run a ferry across the Kootenay, a venture that remained a family business for 24 years, until the first bridge crossed that river in 1888.

Kootenay district historians Dave Kay and D. A. MacDonald tell us that because access to this isolated corner of the colony was from the United States and miners and supplies were virtually all American, colonial merchants clamored for a British route, British supplies and British administration.

So it was that in August, 1864, Magistrate J. C. Haynes rode into the district to establish the fact that the new gold fields were in British territory and subject to British laws.

Shortly afterward, in early 1865, construction began on the famed Dewdney Trail, a pack route from Fort Hope on the Fraser River to Wild Horse Creek.

Remains of that trail, marked with an historic plaque, can still be seen along the Hope-Penticton Highway.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Saturday, June 17, 1972
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Slow pace. Guard health. Keep medical, dental appointments. See in realistic light. Use imagination, but don't let it run away with you. Peek behind the scenes. Keep confidential matters confidential.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Indulging whims of children could be costly. Be fair but firm. Live up to obligations. Past commitment is highlighted. Reward is due but you earn it. Relationships are intensified. Not so good now for speculation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message for valuable hint. One you aided in past is ready to return the favor. Stick to what you know. Property improvement is favored. Aries could play significant role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hold off on journey, if practical. Steer clear of disputes with relatives, neighbors. Finish tasks. Putting things off now would be error. Message may be more serious than at first anticipated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friend offers practical advice about money. You will get nothing for nothing. Know it and act accordingly. You may feel as if you are pulled in two directions simultaneously. Be cautious, patient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotional distress is but temporary. Know it and refuse to be sidetracked from main objective. Experiment. Spread wings. Take chance on own abilities. There is room for you at higher level. Move!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take care of details. Build on solid base. Accent now relates to working with organizations. Long-range plans are discussed. Older individual may be stubborn. Bear with it. Your time will come—and you will win.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friends may argue. Don't get involved. Be neutral without being weak. Member of opposite sex could taunt. Key is to laugh without being foolish. Obviously, this is a time when you must call on hidden resources.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is pressure in legal area. Key is to bide for time. Examine in diplomatic way. Family member can now prove wonderful ally. Achievement is probably — but get green light from authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can deliberate and come up with right decision. Pisces is in picture. You look beyond; you perceive and detect. You learn, teach and travel. You come out of yourself. You are alive, ready and vital.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What appears minor should be taken seriously. One you take for granted is thinking of making a change. Evaluate your needs. Don't throw away something of value. Check financial possibilities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Contract is considered, discussed. Special agreement is on agenda. Marriage and partnership are spotlighted. Aries is likely to be involved. Finish rather than start—round out desires, ambitions.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are foxy, versatile, able to bring order out of apparent confusion. You are making adjustments in domestic area and could move in September. You harmonize with Leo, Aries Libra and Aquarius. You could get inextricably involved with Sagittarius and are fascinated by Capricorn.

Grandmother Manned Thompson's Dikes

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — An attractive, brown-eyed, blonde grandmother who admits to being "near 50" has emerged as one of the leaders in the lengthy battle to contain the Thompson River.

Nora Stocks is an alderman and chairman of the public works committee in the district municipality of Brocklehurst, one of the areas most threatened by the river's spring runoff which came within inches of inundating thousands of homes before the crest was reached Wednesday.

During the fight to build up the earthen dikes and contain the river, Mrs. Stocks became a co-ordinator and directed men and heavy equipment to threatened areas along the banks.

She played a major role in the operation of a 24-hour flood emergency headquarters set up in a community hall.

"I've seen floods before," she said.

"Most of the women have given their time and work felt the same as I did — that there's nothing so important as human life.

"Possessions, almost anything can be replaced, even homes, but human life is something that's very valuable to me and I'm sure its very valuable to everybody."

There were no fatalities during the flood crisis.

Exhausted

She said she was in Winnipeg for the floods in 1950 and at Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., in 1951-52.

Like most others on the flood lines, Mrs. Stocks was virtually exhausted when she paused to talk for a few minutes Wednesday.

"After this, I think we can face up to amost anything."

Rev. Richard Hall, one of many who carried food to the weary dike workers, said women from service clubs played a vital role, along with neighborhood mothers who were simply concerned with the welfare of others.

They served long shifts at an around-the-clock Red Cross centre set up to handle evacuations and other emergencies during the time the river climbed to its peak.

The centre handled the evacuation of about 100 families over a 10-day period. About 60 families comprising 250 persons were evacuated June 2 when a dike burst at the Oak Hills residential subdivision.

"A DATSUN SPORTRUCK IN A SPORTS CAR RACE?" We were astounded, to say the least, when Thudley Pierpoint, our intrepid Three Point Motors test driver and trainee ashtray sweeper announced his mind-boggling plans.

"We agree that Datsun's sexy new 92 h.p. pickup truck DOES have the LOOK of a sports car! And driving one, you DO have to keep reminding yourself you're not whipping around in a 240-Z! But Thudley—a SPORTRUCK in the Mosport Can-Am race?"

It just wasn't possible to discourage Thudley. He had a week's vacation coming and was determined to spend it winning a sports car race. He'd ignore our doubts and keep right on talking about the Sportruck's all-synchro four-on-the-floor . . . the overhead-cam engine . . . the room for a four-sleeper slide-in camper . . . the rugged torsion bar front suspension . . .

Finally, just to keep him happy (but mostly just to shut him up) we agreed to let him use Three Point's huge service department and garage to prepare his truck.

But every night, and well into the next morning, he'd be busy in the shop, applying an optional racing stripe here . . . an optional racing mirror there . . . a vinyl roof . . . a walnut steering wheel.

Our customers come first, though so that meant Thudley had to wait around until closing time, long after the last customer's car had been serviced and double-checked. We thought surely he'd be discouraged at that . . . having to work so late at night after a full DAY'S work!

Suddenly one morning, there was no Thudley and no Sportruck tucked away in the corner of the shop behind the high-speed wheel-balancer. Thudley had gone on holiday. Gone racing!

A week later, he was back, full of praise for his Sportruck . . . but somewhat chagrined. He'd been tired already, and by the time he got the wife and kids and all their gear loaded, they were so far behind schedule he had to drive non-stop to get to the race on time.

He was late anyway. But in his dazed condition, he didn't realize it and upon arriving at Mosport, he somehow managed to get the Sportruck onto the track and across the finish line just as the real winner got the checkered flag!

Thinking HE'D won, Thudley rushed to the winner's circle and managed to convince quite a few OTHER people—before his wife arrived and diplomatically unconvinced everyone, including Thudley.

If you'd like to see and test-drive the new DATSUN SPORTRUCK, ask Dave Brown or any of the other friendly Three Point salesmen for a guided tour of Canada's sportiest pickup truck.

Conn Smythe Likes Odds; Jolts Experts

TORONTO (CP) — Exclaiming "you can't get odds like that at a race track," Conn Smythe confounded the prognosticators Thursday and entered his chestnut colt Fifty Guineas in the 113th running of the Queen's Plate.

Experts had been declaring that Smythe, whose horse was bumped and finished far back in the Plate trials, would pass up the classic this Saturday but the tanned and dapper 77-year-old turned up at the call-over breakfast and snapped:

The entry of Fifty Guineas extended the Plate field to 15 and Smythe, who has won North America's oldest continuous sports event twice before, grinned as he won the number one post position in the draw.

John J. Mooney, president of The Jockey Club Limited, owners of Woodbine racetrack where the Plate has been held continuously since 1956, said: "The gross value of the Plate this year is $86,375, of which the winner will receive $56,143.75. This is not a record, although it's very close to one."

The richest Plate was in 1970, when Almoner won $57,395 of the gross purse of $88,300.

Second place this year will pay $17,275 with $8,637.50 for third and $4,318.75 for fourth.

"At this point, you could pick seven or eight horses and base your selection with logic on any one of them.

"I certainly feel you must give consideration to Parkrangle, Gentleman Conn, Victoria Song and, perhaps, Fifty Guineas."

Smythe said it cost him $1,000 to keep Fifty Guineas eligible and with a first prize of $56,000 — "I like the odds. Fifty-six to one. You can't get those odds at a race track."

"I made some money yesterday and I spent it today," Smythe said.

The 56-1 applies only to the owner. The betting odds on the morning line Thursday showed the Smythe horse at 20-1.

Probable post time is 2:15 p.m. Victoria time.

"They're bringing in John Baboolal from Maryland," Mooney said. "This boy did ride Gentleman Conn successfully in his races in the United States. I think he'll get along very well with Gentleman Conn."

The call-over was held in a blustery wind in the walking ring but Mooney said the forecast for Saturday is "sunny and warm — which makes me nervous."

There are two western horses in the field — Madly Magic, owned by R. J. Bennett of Vancouver, son of the premier of British Columbia, and Nice Dancer, owned by Tom Morton of Calgary and Harlequin Stable of Winnipeg.

Madly Magic drew the No. 10 gate and the probable odds are 30-1. Nice Dancer will go from number five position and the odds are listed at 15-1. Neither had been assigned a jockey at call-over time.

Eagles scored eight runs in the sixth inning Thursday night en route to a 14-8 Industrial Softball League victory over Langford Drywall at Macdonald Park.

Max Enjoys San Diego's Challenge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Max McNab, head coach and general manager of the Western Hockey League San Diego Gulls, says he was offered a job by a team in the World Hockey Association but turned it down.

While not disclosing which franchise approached him, McNab said, "I told them I felt we had a large enough challenge here. When you've been with something for six years, right from the start, you don't like to leave."

McNab, who said he is continuing his search for someone to replace him as the Gulls' coach, told reporters there were other reasons for him not wanting to switch to the WHA.

Hargreaves Signs For Second Year

NELSON, (CP) — Nelson Maple Leafs of the Western International Hockey League have announced the signing of playing-coach Ted Hargreaves for next season.

It will be the second year with the club for Hargreaves, a former player with Tulsa in the Central League and a former captain of the Canadian national team.

EXPLODING FROM THE TRAP Jack Nicklaus's ball pops toward the fourth green on Pebble Beach to save par during the opening round of the U.S. Open. (See also Page 14). Nicklaus carded a one-under-par 71 as he began his quest for the second championship in golf's grand slam.

Majors' Attendance Up

By The Associated Press

When baseball's major league players conducted their unprecedented strike at the start of the season, there was concern that fans would turn their backs on the game.

Well, they haven't. In fact, attendance is up a bit, a survey by Harry Simmons, an administrative assistant to commissioner Bowie Kuhn, shows.

The results of the survey covering attendance through the first nine weeks of the season offer two basic conclusions: The fans are still coming out to the ballpark but attendance lost by the strike will hurt the owners.

The survey compares playing dates through June 11 of this season with the corresponding number of dates in 1971, eliminating the attendance lost during the strike, which wiped out 84 games.

For those parallel periods, major league attendance increased by 126,867—1.6 per cent—meaning more fans have seen games in person this year since the strike ended than went to the same span of games last year.

But over-all attendance has been hard hit by the strike, the survey shows. Because of the lost playing dates, 1,419,240 fewer fans have been to a game this year.

Even if the 1.6 per cent increase holds for the rest of the season, baseball can expect to have a drop of about 1.2 million for the entire year.

Brenda Newest Threat In Women's Golf Event

Three former winners and a new challenger rank as the major threats to Dale Shaw's hopes of winning the Victoria City women's golf championship for a third straight time.

Margaret Todd of Victoria Golf Club, Joan Lawson of Uplands and Gorge Vale's Shirley Naysmith, who together have accumulated 20 victories in the city event, loom as the major threat's to Miss Shaw's domination.

MOTHERS TO PLAY OFFICIALS

Mothers of Players in the American Little League plan to assume a more active role than just warming the bleachers this weekend.

A team of mothers has challenged the managers and coaches to a fund-and-fun-raising baseball game beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday in Allenby Park.

GALLUP REPORT

Few Fans Favor NHL Expansion

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

At the end of another hockey season the big majority of fans report that the expanded NHL is making hockey less enjoyable for them. This attitude is held by a two-to-one ratio over those who find hockey more enjoyable with the larger number of teams involved.

Nationally, 61 per cent of those who describe themselves as fans, find less pleasure with the NHL expansion, while 30 per cent say it is more enjoyable for them. Less than one in ten is undecided.

Interest in hockey runs at about the same level through all age groups under fifty, with younger people more interested than older generations.

Nationally, half the adults say they are hockey fans, with the highest proportion (56 per cent) among those under thirty. Over fifty this ratio drops to 44 per cent.

With further expansion in the NHL planned for coming seasons, Gallup interviewers set out to discover just how the fans were reacting to the situation.

The first question:

"Do you happen to be a hockey fan?"

Here's the response, nationally, and among the main age groups.

NDP's Barrett Suing Bennett

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Premier W. A. C. Bennett was named today in a libel and slander suit filed by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett in the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

The suit alleges that on June 14 Bennett "falsely and maliciously, by the words used, and by further innuendo," stated that the NDP leader "was responsible" for the assaults on cabinet ministers on June 7 in New Westminster.

Premier Bennett, commenting at a press conference this morning on the possibility that the Barrett action might muzzle him during any election campaign, said: "The premier of British Columbia won't be muzzled by a cry-baby politician like Dave Barrett.

"He is just a cry-baby trying to muzzle the premier during what he thinks will be an election. Such action is unheard of in the parliamentary system."

Asked if he was aware that Barrett had filed a writ bringing a libel and slander action against him, Bennett snapped: "I don't pay any attention to Barrett. He's just a cry-baby.

"This is another reason why he is unfit to be premier of this province. The NDP should get rid of him," Bennett said.

Filing of the writ by Barrett and lawyer Alex Macdonald in the court registry nearly caused an incident. A brief argument between Macdonald and court registrar Tom Halbett dissipated, however.

Macdonald, NDP MLA for Vancouver East, said after the writ was filed that Bennett's statement blaming Barrett for the New Westminster disturbance was more than a blanket charge against union persons or the labor movement.

"Now somebody has been singled out with a very grave charge . . . and we intend to have our day in court."

The writ says that Vancouver lawyer Andrew J. Carmichael will be representing Barrett in the case.

Macdonald said he was acting as counsel for Barrett at the moment and any further involvement by him would depend on his availability and Barrett's wishes.

Here is the text of the writ:

"The plaintiff's (Barrett's) claim is for damages for libel and slander contained in words used, published and broadcast by the defendant on or about the 14th day of June, 1972, at or about the Legislative Buildings, Victoria, British Columbia, in which the defendant falsely and maliciously by the words used, and further by innuendo, stated and implied that the plaintiff was responsible for and a party to the implicated in unlawful assaults and abuse of ministers of the Crown occurring at the city of New Westminster, province of British Columbia, as a result of which the plaintiff has suffered damage both personally and in his office and calling; and for costs."

Barrett first hinted he would sue Bennett Thursday, and later informed news media he was going ahead with the action.

At least one cabinet minister was injured in the New Westminster incident from which the libel action arises. Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford suffered bruises and a cracked collarbone.

New Westminster police said Thursday they were launching charges against an individual who had attacked Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and were considering two more charges of damage to property against other persons.

Barrett later made statements in which he said the incident was a spontaneous act of human nature, but that a climate of frustration and fear created by Premier Bennett had helped precipitate the incident.

Woods, Mill IWA Strike Spreading

Unauthorized but legal strike action by members of the International Woodworkers of America brought most coast forest operations to a halt today as forest workers stayed off the job for the second day.

And union leaders in the deadlocked construction industry dispute are maintaining their staunch opposition to a cabinet order to appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission.

More than 12,500 men — more than a third of the forest industry — were reported off the job at logging and sawmill operations on Vancouver Island, the lower mainland and northern coast forest areas.

Hardest-hit by the walkouts is MacMillan Bloedel, with 5,600 men affected by either strike action or by layoffs due to prolonged wildcat strike activity by fallers.

More than 2,300 men at MB's Port Alberni operations were off the job for the second day along with 1,080 men in logging camps on Vancouver Island. They were joined today by 180 men at a Queen Charlottes logging operation and an undetermined number of men at Kitimat.

MILL CLOSED

Crown Zellerbach Ltd. was brought into the picture today, after being unaffected by walkouts Thursday, when the Fraser Mill operation was shut down, idling 1,100 workers. In addition, 175 loggers at Nitinat and 45 at Kitimat walked out.

Canadian Forest Products camp at Inglewood at the north end of the Island was closed down again today, with 500 men off the job. About 365 men at Squamish and New Westminster closed down operations of Weldwood of Canada. Tahsis Co. employees struck, involving 1,125 men. 470 Rayonier men walked out and 300 men struck Twin River Timber at Terrace.

Nine of the 18 unions in the construction industry, still without contracts with Construction Labor Relations Association, say they will not appear Tuesday when the dispute goes to arbitration.

Commission chairman John Parker said he has asked

Flooding Aid Detailed

The B.C. government has established a flood reparations committee and will take immediate action to assist individuals and municipalities whose property has been damaged by flooding, Premier Bennett announced today.

The premier said the B.C. government would pay 50 per cent of the damage costs and the federal government has been asked to pay the remainder.

"The cost of work crews and equipment already used in fighting floods will be considered a part of the provincial contribution," Bennett said. "If that does not make up the 50 per cent, then cash payments will be made.

Bennett also announced that legislation will be presented at the next session "concerning future flood damage in areas determined to be vulnerable to continued threat.

"It is evident that some individuals and developers have built on lands that are unsuitable because of the danger of flooding. Under the legislation

World Air Strike On for Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian airlines will be grounded Monday when pilots take part in a world-wide one-day strike in protest against air piracy.

The walkout is not directed against any specific government, Capt. Charles Simpson, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association, said today. Nor was it a work stoppage aimed at airlines.

But there is an "immediate and urgent need" for drastic action to ensure strict control of airways, he said.

The 24-hour strike was called by the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations, which represents pilots in 64 countries.

The federation asked United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim Thursday night to seek action by the Security Council against international air hijackings, but a federation spokesman said no action was forthcoming as a result of the meeting.

Simpson said there was "no alternative in the face of international lethargy" but to call a strike.

"Words must now be replaced by action so that once and for all the net closes in on skyjirates and those who attack civil aviation."

The strike is scheduled to start around the world at 6 a.m. Greenwich Mean Time (1 p.m. Sunday Pacific Daylight Time).

Angered China Rejects Anti-Pollution Draft

STOCKHOLM (CP) — China announced today a sweeping rejection of the United Nations environment principles and launched a biting attack against the United States, accusing her of massacring millions of people in Indochina.

Chang Ke, the chief Chinese delegate at the UN environment conference, also accused Japan of being a nuclear base and accomplice of U.S. imperialism and charged that New Zealand, which had sought a ban on atmospheric nuclear tests, was sympathetic with the aggression of the super-powers.

The Chinese delegation launched this blockbuster political attack as the conference plenary session began debating the draft declaration on the human environment, a set of guiding principles which China refused to support.

Change Ke said the declaration should have contained China's proposal that the super-powers ban nuclear weapons and pledge never to be the first to use these as well as biological and chemical weapons which the Chinese claim would cause pollution.

Arguing that there is no consensus in the conference for adopting the draft declaration, Change Ke maintained that the working committee which drafted the principles should have been content to report only those measures on which there had been total agreement, leaving other points for continuing negotiations later.

Despite the stormy Chinese statement, conference officials were still confident that the draft declaration would be adopted by the plenary session with criticism noted only as reservations and objections.

But it was clear that all the corridor and back-room attempts by a number of delegations to persuade China to join the UN anti-pollution campaign had failed. Chang Ke said China joins with the common people of the world to fight imperialism and improve the environment. The conference, he said, could rely on the people of the world to stand together.

As the debate continued, there were questions among some conference officials whether in fact some reference to nuclear weapons can still be made in the principles or whether the issue will have to be shunted aside and referred to the UN General Assembly.

The over-all set of principles is in effect a sermon to the world that "Thou shalt not pollute thy neighbor."

The Chinese view that the principles, known as the declaration on the human environment, doesn't go far enough was emphasized in an all-night closed-door session of a drafting committee which sought a consensus among delegates that never fully materialized.

S. VIET CIVILIAN TOLL NOW 1.25M

WASHINGTON (AP) — The current North Vietnamese offensive has killed or wounded about 80,000 civilians in South Vietnam to date, according to estimates released Thursday by the senate refugee sub-committee.

The calculation included casualties inflicted by both North Vietnamese and allied forces since the stepped up fighting and bombing began March 30 — the day Hanoi launched its offensive.

The sub-committee estimate indicates that the current fighting is the bloodiest for civilians since the United States entered the war in a major way in 1965.

* * *

The sub-committee said the comparable figure for the Tet offensive of 1968 is 62,000 casualties.

The estimates are based on hospital admission figures supplied by the Saigon government, on data from hospitals and clinics not covered in the Saigon government's survey, and on reports from voluntary agencies in Vietnam.

Adding these estimates to the previous ones, made by the sub-committee raises the total of civilian casualties in South Vietnam since 1965 to 1.25 million people, including 380,000 killed, through May, 1972. Here is the sub-committee's year by year estimates of civilian war casualties in South Vietnam:

GUZZLERS UNIONIZE TO BEAT 'FIZZIES'

SALFORD, England (Reuter) — England's beer drinkers, embittered by changes in their drink and in the pubs where they drink it, are organizing.

An official of Britain's newest union, the campaign for the Revitalization of Ale, said Thursday his group now has 500 members.

The want more of the traditional, cosy pubs instead of "those vast new pubs with their flashy gimmicks" being built by breweries all over England.

And they want to preserve the straight-from-the-barrel draught beers that are steadily being replaced by fizzier brews packed under pressure in metal kegs.

PETER FALK Emmy-winning star of the successful NBC-TV Mystery Movie Series COLOMBO

Colombo Returns for Fall Season

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Having paid his dues to the theatre which birthed his acting career by giving it a full season of his talent, Peter Falk is on his way back to the television that has made him a nationally known star in one season.

Falk headed for his Hollywood home after winding up on June 3 eight months of a stage work in Neil Simon's The Prisoner of Second Avenue, a season-long sellout, to make another six or seven one-hour video episodes as Columbo, the sloppy, low-key, methodical, cigar-smoking deceptively bumbling detective lieutenant.

The star had one regret about leaving New York. His art studies will have to be discontinued for the next three months at least. Art studies?

"Yeh, I'm hooked on art," Falk said. "When the play opened here last fall, I enrolled at the Art Students League. I'd been doodling around off and on, and my wife, who used to be a designer, felt I had some talent for drawing. Besides, here I was with a long run ahead of me, my family on the coast and with a lot of time on my hands.

"Well, I spent seven to eight hours a day at the League — but just in the mornings on the two matinee days — sketching in charcoal with models, and I've never been so caught up in anything except acting.

"But I'm not going to be able to continue with this in Hollywood while I'm making the new Columbo episodes.

"You see, I have to be up by 6 each morning, and I put in any 11 or 12-hour day on the set. We spend about 11 days on each episode, shooting one right after the other. Say, I do seven again, like last season. That just about uses up three months, and I certainly have no free time in that period to spend sketching. And after I finish the series, I may be involved in a movie project I'm considering."

A number of good movie and television roles and occasional stage appearances over the years have not left Falk an unknown, but like many another actor with good credentials, it took a successful television series to establish him solidly with a mass public.

"Funny thing is," Falk said, "it might have happened earlier. There's been discussion about a Columbo series for almost five years.

"You see, I played him in one of those two-hour-made-for-television movies, Prescription Murder, that long ago. Gene Barry was in it. But we couldn't get together on the right formula for a long time. I didn't want to do a weekly series, for one thing. Just a few episodes a season.

"Then we finally came up with this NBC Mystery Movie set up on Wednesday nights that was three different series alternating — Columbo, The McMillans with Rock Hudson and Susan Saint James and McCloud with Dennis Weaver. I signed for six episodes and did a seventh because I wanted to try my hand at directing one. Enjoyed it; may do it again."

For the coming season, NBC is moving the program from 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays to 7:30 p.m. Sundays and adding a fourth series that brings Richard Boone back to the homescreen after a long absence.

Another Broadway play for Falk in the near future?

"Who knows?" he replied. "It's such a gamble. Even with a good script, you can open and close overnight. I was lucky this time. It's a pleasure to play before a packed house every performance and feel that appreciation coming back to you from the audience.

"And I love New York. It's my kind of town."

Television Questions and Answers

By PENNY PENCE

Q: Primus,' the syndicated series in which Robert Brown starred last season, was really terrible, but we're still a fan of Robert Brown. Will he be in anything good next season? — R.H.

A: That's a matter of opinion, depending upon how you feel about The New Dick Van Dyke Show. He'll be in an episode of that series. Watch for him in the fall.

Q: I would like to write Nanette Fabray about a school for deaf children. She was on a talk show some time ago and mentioned such a school. Where can I contact her? — Sharon.

A: Write Nunette in care of her agent, The Pickman Company, Inc., 124 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212

Q: Those paintings used on Night Gallery are spectacular. Can any of them be purchased? — B.W.

A: No. Artist Tom Wright was commissioned to paint all 50 portraits for Universal Studios, and despite the fact that he's had many requests to buy or borrow the works, they are property of Universal and Wright cannot sell or loan them.

Q: Sebastian Cabot was one of our favorite celebrities when he was on The Family Affair. Now we understand he's scheduled to return to television in another series. Which one? — L.I. Beach.

Q: With all the nostalgia interest in movies and on TV, and all the old-timers making comebacks, why haven't we seen Roy Rogers back on the tube? — E.W.

A: Have patience and you will see him again. He's been signed to host a syndicated series of shows about the great old cowboys of the West.

Q: I've been waiting seven years to see Mary Poppins either on TV or in the theatres again, but to no avail. Will we ever see that lovely classic again? — G.C.

A: Of course, but most likely not for another three years. The studio policy seems to be a rerelease of a classic movie every ten years or a sale to TV at such a time when a superlucrative deal can be made. Disney Studios has announced no such deal to date.

Q: A friend told me Rosalind Russell will appear in a television special next year and I say that can't be true, that Rosalind Russell is crippled and has retired. — V.F.

A: The invincible Miss Russell would take great affront to your supposition. She has suffered from time to time with arthritis, but has it medically under control enough that she's before cameras now for an ABC Movie of the Week to air next fall.

Q. Read where Harvey Korman is directing The New Dick Van Dyke Show, and would like to know if that means he'll be leaving the Carol Burnett Show.—L.D.

A. It means nothing similar to such a proposal. Harvey recently directed one episode of the Van Dyke Show and hopes to direct again, but wouldn't give up his berth on Carol's show for anything. Except, maybe, his own series.

MOVIES

Friday

Broken Lance (xxx) On 7 at 7. Spencer Tracy stars as the tyrannical head of a family who creates violence and hatred among his sons. Excellent in supporting roles are Richard Widmark, Robert Wagner, Jean Peters and Katy Jurado.

Charlie Bubbles (xxx) On 8 at 8. A tantalizing British-made movie that has Albert Finney directing and starring. He is wonderfully resourceful in creating the image of a young man of modest circumstances who is catapulted out of his station and into fame, fortune and an excessive boredom he simply cannot bear. Joylessly he lives it up with a drinking crony, drives about the country with his mistress and seeks a reconciliation with his ex-wife. Liza Minelli is excellent in a supporting role, that also co-stars Colin Blakely and Billie Whitelaw.

I Thank A Fool (xxx) On 5 at 8:30. The Irish countryside provides the setting for this brooding tale of madness and murder starring Susan Hayward and Peter Finch.

The Young Philadelphians (xxx) On 12 at 9. Philadelphia's high society provides the background for this story of a man bent on becoming a prominent attorney — no matter what the cost. Strong performances by Paul Newman, Barbara Rush and Alexis Smith are enhanced by co-star Robert Vaughan delivering a superb portrayal of a rich young man who is framed on a murder charge.

Poppy (xxx) On 11 at 11. A delightful 1936 W. C. Fields comedy about a carnival barker and his daughter who turn up in a small town where the girl promptly falls in love with the mayor's son. Supporting cast includes Rochelle Hudson and Richard Cromwell.

The Monolith Monsters (xxx) On 7 at 11:30. Science fiction fare about a meteorite landing in the desert that begins expanding to alarming proportions.

Away All Boats (xxx) On 12 at 11:35. A Second World War naval drama highlighted by action sequences and outrageous heroics performed by George Nader and Jeff Chandler.

A Hard Day's Night (xxx) On 2 at 11:30. The Beatles' first film venture is a delightful Marx Brothers-like romp, with some of their best tunes. Director Richard Lester filmed the story of these four captivating personalities on a tour in England with a sense of frenzy and unabashed humor. Stylishly inventive — a contemporary comedy classic.

Charlie Bubbles (xxx) On 6 at midnight. (See earlier this evening for details.)

The Brain That Wouldn't Die (x) On 8 at midnight. Melodramatic nonsense about a scientist who tries to bring his dead girl friend back to life.

The Wild North (xx) On 4 at 1. Stewart Granger and Cyd Charisse star in this 1952 drama about a Mountie who attemps to bring a murder suspect back to civilization.

Blood of Dracula (x) On 7 at 1. Another horror melodrama, this one about a teen-age girl under the spell of a teacher who leads her into vampirism.

Frenchie (xx) On 12 at 1:25. A 1950 western starring Shelley Winters as a saloon keeper who has come west to avenge her father's murder. Good supporting cast with Joel McCrea and Elsa Lanchester.

A Boy Ten Feet Tall (xxx), on 4 at 8:30. An excellent British-made adventure about a young boy and an old rogue who team up to fight 4,000 miles of rough African terrain in search of the boy's only living relative. Edward G. Robinson stars as the boy's dismond smuggling companion, wise in the ways of survival.

Doctor in Clover (xxx), on 8 at 9. Another entry in Britain's popular satires of the medical profession. The slapstick proceedings hinge on romantic entanglements and competition between doctors for a choice hospital post. Cast includes Leslie Phillips, James Robertson Justice and Shirley Anne Field.

TV Comedy for Godfather Heavy

A versatile and highly creative actor, he shuttles with equal ease between broad comedy like Lovers and to the somber drama of The Godfather, in which he co-stars as a ruthless hood.

As a youngster in his native New York, Castellano vaguely thought of becoming an actor. But by the time he had graduated from Commerce High School, such fancies were behind him. He went into business for himself, leasing embroidery machines to factories, and then — dissatisfied with results — started a construction company in Queens that yielded a handsome profit.

While hospitalized briefly for hepatitis, Castellano decided to chuck it all and become an actor. He enrolled in the Actors Mobile Theatre and, after acquiring the necessary skills and confidence, began performing in off-Broadway plays. Later, he toured with AMT productions.

He made his off-Broadway debut in 1956 in a revival of Arthur Miller's A View from the Bridge. Starting with a small role, he took over the lead when Robert Duvall left the play to make a movie. Castellano remained with the production for a year, leaving to make his film debut in A Fine Madness with Sean Connery.

Among his subsequent Broadway credits were The Investigation and That Summer — That Fall, in which he starred with Irene Papas and Jon Voight. Later, he joined the Stratford (Conn.) Repertory, then returned to Broadway for a short run in Mike Downstairs, which gained him exceptional reviews.

Castellano flew to Yugoslavia for his next film, The Golden Beetle, in which he starred with Ardell Sheridan. The actress plays his wife in both The Super and The Godfather.

When Lovers and Other Strangers opened in New York in 1968, Castellano was singled out by the critics for his portrayal of Frank. After leaving the play he co-starred in a Joshua Logan-David Merrick play, Why I Went Crazy, in which he played the dual role of a brother and sister modeled after W. C. Fields and Mae West. His most recent Broadway assignment was Sheep on the Runway, Art Buchwald's political comedy.

Castellano has made numerous guest appearances on television in such series as N.Y.P.D., Naked City, The Defenders and The Nurses.

RICHARD CASTELLANO plays Joe, the superintendent of a big city brownstone, who settles tenant arguments and fixes broken windows with equal aplomb in The Super on CBC-TV beginning Sunday, June 18 at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6.

Elvis 'Tame' and Taking Vitamins

By DONALD THORNTON

NEW YORK (UPI) — Elvis Presley said his gyrating performances of 15 years ago, which shocked thousands of parents and got him censored below the waist on television, were "tame compared to what they're doing now."

"All I did was jiggle," Presley, now 37, told one of his rare news conferences.

"I love you Elvis," shouted an attractive woman reporter in her mid-20s. "Thank you dear," replied Presley.

Asked about the screams which started more than 15 years and 30 gold records ago, Presley said, "I got used to them. I'd miss it now if it didn't happen. To me its part of the business, and I accept it."

"I take Vitamin E," he said. But he added, "I don't know. I enjoy the business.

"I'd like to think I've improved over the last 15 years," he said. "But I don't want to take away from my early hits. I'm not the least bit ashamed of Hound Dog and Heartbreak Hotel." Presley, whose weekend appearances at Madison Square Garden reportedly sold out in record time, also was asked his views on Vietnam and politics.

"Honey," he replied to the female reporter asking the questions, "I'd just as soon keep my personal opinions to myself. I'm just an entertainer."

Silver-haired Vernon Presley then got into the act. He was asked by another woman reporter what he thought of his son's success.

"Kinda hard to say," replied the elder Presley. "Happened so fast — boom — in 1956 after the first (Ed) Sullivan show."

Then Col. Tom Parker, Presley's manager who mapped the singer's long success, took over. Wearing a straw cowboy hat and smoking a cigar, the chubby colonel ended the news conference with the words: "That's it boys."

ELVIS PRESLEY

Canadian Actor Hosts Popular TV Series

AUSTIN WILLIS and ranged around him is the fearless forensic foursome for CBC Television's summer and fall series This is the Law which returns Monday, June 19 at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6. They are, left to right, Susan Keller, William Charlton, Larry Solway and Hart Pomerantz. You'll be seeing them often as they try to guess the laws broken by Paul Soles, lawbreaker.

Direct from Hollywood, where he has been appearing in The FBI Story, The Invaders, I Spy, Cannon, The Bold Ones, Storefront Lawyers, Mannix and many more, Austin Willis returns to Toronto and his native Canada to be the moderator this season of CBC-TV's This Is The Law series.

This Is The Law (which many people call TITL) returns to CBC television Monday, June 19 at 9:30 p.m., and goes into the fall season with a panel of the "forensic fearsome foursome," better known as Hart Pomerantz, Larry Solway, William Charlton and Susan Keller, who try to guess laws which Paul Soles has dramatically broken.

The laws, of course, are sent in by members of the audience from both Canada and the United States. They are laws that usually have been on the statute books for some time and nowadays seem downright silly.

Producer of TITL is Nigel Napier-Andrews, who democratically dropped the Napier and hyphen when he first came to Canada from England. However, when Nigel began getting Neil-Andrews' bills in the mail at the CBC, and when he noticed that there are at least 353 (an exaggeration) other Andrews in the Toronto phone book, he reinstated his hyphenated name quickly.

FAMED GEOPHYSICIST INTERVIEWED ON CBC

Prof. J. Tuzo Wilson, world-famous geophysicist and traveller, who now serves as principal of Erindale College near Toronto, talks with John Davie Hamilton about the Chinese, earthquakes and Canada's Arctic on CBC-TV's Distinguished Canadians series Monday, June 19 at 10:30 p.m.

John Tuzo Wilson, at 63, is one of the world's great globe-trotters who prides himself on having visited both the North and Soth Poles and ever continent.

While he is an internationally-famous geophysicist, he likes to travel for the sake of travelling.

"During my lifetime as a scientist, we have come to realize that the surface of the earth is like the surface of a turtle, a hard shell divided into plates," he told John David Hamilton. "When two plates rub together you get earthquakes and we know exactly where earthquakes are likely to occur."

When he was visiting Peking in 1971, Chinese scientists showed him an earthquake map which charted all of the major Chinese earthquakes, one of which killed more than 800,000 people in 1856. The Alaska earthquake of 1964, the Assam earthquake of 1951, and the Chilean earthquake of 1960 were of the largest magnitude.

Counter to popular rumor, Professor Wilson does not believe that Southern California is in any danger of an earthquake with might breach the coast of the Gulf of California and flood the Imperial Valley. He does believe that there is danger in building an oil-pipeline through earthquake fault zones in Alaska.

As for development of our Arctic, Professor Wilson shrugs and says there is little hope of saving it in its unspoiled form: "They've never hesitated at damage in the south so I don't think anybody's going to hesitate in the north. It's sad but I think you have to face that."

Curiously enough, Professor Wilson, who was born and grew up in Ottawa, was so unconcious of Canadian geography when he went to the University of Toronto that "I asked another freshman what was the lake at the foot of Yonge Street? I thought it was one of the Great Lakes, all right, but didn't know which one it was."

Daytime TV Puts Network Profits Up

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Those daytime television hours, between breakfast and dinner, may look like so much lead to you, but they look golden to the three television networks. As one network executive put it: "Daytime is where we make our profit."

The night hours, with big name stars and huge (for TV) production budgets, get most of the public's attention. But those hours don't return the kinds of profits that enable executives to retire early or that make stockholders smile. First, the cost of night time programing has risen much faster than the audience has increased. Yet, caught in the competitive wrangle, no network can allow itself to be left out of the bidding for a high priced series. Second, and probably worse, is the continued failure rate in prime time. Each season between one-third and one-half of all new TV series will fail. And with that failure and series cancelation goes huge investment losses.

The season now ending is a good example of financial disaster. It was to have been the season when motion picture stars, established box-office performers, would dominate the viewing. On such an assumption, great investments were made in the likes of James Stewart, Shirley MacLaine, James Garner, George Kennedy, Anthony Quinn, Tony Curtis and Glenn Ford.

All now have at least one thing in common: not one of the programs starring those established box-office performers won enough audience to be renewed for a second season.

Accountants have sworn under oath that neither a network nor a film studio can profit from a series that runs only one season. Profits don't come until the third season, for only then has the original investment in sets, scripts and performers been amortized. Some series, in truth, never show a profit until sold to individual stations for syndicated re-runs and into foreign markets.

The daytime hours, where costs are low and more commercials are permitted by the broadcasters' own code of limitations, provide the profit. Daytime drama, otherwise known as soap opera, can provide a full week of programing for the cost of one half hour of The Shirley MacLaine Show. Game shows are relatively cheap, too, and so are the endless reruns of situation comedies.

The CBS Television Network once dominated daytime television with its long running soap operas, game shows and re-runs of comedies. The 1960s, for example, CBS Daytime ratings were larger than the combined totals of NBC and ABC. This is no longer true.

A recent issue of broadcasting magazine noted that the three commercial television networks are "running neck-and-neck for daytime ratings."

The closeness of the ratings has prompted a change in CBS daytime programing and more changes are on the way. Managers of TV stations affiliated with CBS were told at a meeting last month in Los Angeles that the network is planning to build "personality-audience participation block" (of programs) "in the morning."

Other changes can be expected in the never-ending game of movie-and-counter-move in daytime television.

One of the most surprising moves came this spring when NBC-TV decided to try a Return to Peyton Place (3:30 p.m., weekdays, NBC). The move added still another chapter to the long running saga of a trashy, poorly written novel that threatens to become a mass media institution. From the first novel, Peyton Place by the late Grace Metalious, came a second novel, two motion pictures and a prime time television series that occupied two nights each week on ABC-TV.

(The TV series is one of the puzzlers. It did very well on the network and at the end of its run stations eagerly bid for re-run rights. Those that bought the series, however, were usually disappointed by ratings and at many stations now the series lies in vaults — not in station schedules — awaiting a better climate for showing.)

Tower In Mecca

Portrait of Islam

"There is no God but Allah; Mohammed is the messenger of Allah." (first 'Pillar' of Islam.)

Today, few in the western world know much about Islam, yet this monotheistic faith founded in Arabia by the prophet Mohammed in the seventh century now is practised by one-seventh of the world's population.

The origin spread and influence of the Moslem faith is vividly chronicled in Islam, a series of seven, full-hour film documentaries to be colorcast starting Tuesday, June 20 at 10 p.m.

The strikingly-photographed, painstakingly-researched series was originally an Italian-French co-production. The English-language version to be seen on CBC is distributed by Bruce Raymond Ltd., Canadian representatives for Radiotelevisione Italiana. Narrators are Jon Granik and Colin Fox.

Filming was done throughout the Moslem world by Italian crews. Extensive footage was shot in the cradle of Islam, Saudi Arabia, a relatively inaccessible nation for western journalists lately; but even the Italians were not permitted to nter the holy city of Mecca — a site barred to all 'infidels.' However, a Moslem cameraman was commissioned to film in Mecca and the series includes rare views of the city, including ceremonies held during the 'hadj' or pilgrimage of the faithful.

The series premiere, June 20, is entitled On the Threshold. It backgrounds in detail the way of life, customs, religious beliefs, commerce and social structure of the Arabian world from Roman times to the sixth century, just prior to the birth of Mohammed. It sets the scene for future episodes by showing the environment into which the prophet Mohammed was born and in which he carried out his mission to preach the message of Allah.

The program indicates that pre-Islamic Arabia was an arid land of nomadic Bedouins, strtegically located at the crossroads of East-West trade routes. Romans called it Arabia felix (happy Arabia) but it was a country of sharp contrasts where desert Bedouins eked out a marginal living and multitudes of poor in oases and cities along major caravan routes lived under the oppressive rule of a few wealthy merchants and a stern pagan priesthood.

It was also a land of myriad pagan gods, idols and primitive superstitious beliefs. Thus it was ripe for the unifying force of a monotheistic faith, incorporating much of the Judaeo - Christian tradition, and emphasizing the principles of brotherhood and equality among all who turned to the one God, Allah.

On the Threshold abounds in visual higlilights. It graphically shows the daily routine of the Bedouin today — changed hardly at all from the way their ancestors lived centuries ago. It points out that pre-Islamic Arabians were, of necessity, clannish; the spirit of hospitality towards one's neighbor was chesished in the harsh, desert environment. The film recounts how wandering desert poets went from camp to camp singing of Arab traditions and history, and helping to form a common language spoken by millions today — Arabic.

Cabaret Co-Star Has Image Problem

By DAN LEWIS

There was a time when Joel Grey did things because he had to. It was a case of survival, as well as the grind called "paying the dues" in building a career.

Now Joel says he does only what he wants.

"I once spent 10 weeks in something called Mardi Gras at Jones Beach. I hated it. But I had to do it to live."

Now he's turning down offers that don't appeal to him.

"The money is terrific," said Joel, "but it no longer is the deciding factor in my choices."

Joel is now a star. Diminutive, talented in many areas (acting, singing and dancing), his presence has been felt and admired greatly on Broadway, and now in the movies, with fantastic impact. He was on television in just one single, but outstanding appearance.

He sang and danced his way through a daring, highly imaginative opening production number to get the Academy Awards telecast off to a bombastic start. "Rarely have I had as much reaction to anything I've done as I did to that one number on TV," Joel revealed.

Acting Heritage

If the Oscar telecast did anything for Joel Grey, it was to let the rest of the country, and some of the world, know what Broadway already knew, and what those who have seen him in the film Cabaret now recognize: Joel has an immense talent.

Pound for pound, Joel Grey could compare favorably with anyone when it comes to talent. But then, he goes back a long way, and acting is part of his heritage. Joel's father is Mickey Katz, a long-time star of Yiddish stage and clubs.

In one of those instances for which Hollywood is rarely noted, Joel was called upon to recreate for the movie version the role he created in the stage production of Cabaret. He played the sleezy, obscene Nazi master-of-ceremonies in the rathskeller. He had no dialogue, just songs, his lips painted with cherry-red lipstick. He is a weasel-looking character.

"Some reviewers pulled out all the degrading, deflating adjectives about my performance," Joel said.

"They called me depraved, obscene, dirty, unscrupulous. I loved it. It meant I had given this dirty little Nazi the kind of image he deserved."

Cabaret, the movie, has increased Joel's stature as an actor, but sometimes success can cultivate problems, like the problem of an image. It has happened to Joel in the past.

"When I was 20, I played an 11-year-old. So all I got were offers to play 11-year-olds," he said. "Then I did Cabaret on Broadway, and I was deluged with that type of role."

The acclaim he got for the Broadway effort in Cabaret (where he was given feature not star billing) led to the starring role in George M, and once again Joel got rave reviews.

"So all the offers to do song-and-dance shows poured in," Joel recalled. "I'm an actor. I don't want to play one part. I want to play what I want. I may fail, but at least I will have tried."

There has been talk as is inevitable when someone emerges as a star, of a television series. The thought does not overwhelm Joel. "I don't want to do a series," he said emphatically, then added, "my agents say I shouldn't say it. But I'm in a new phase of my career, and I still have a lot of growing and experiencing to do. Television turns you into a whole other kind of commodity that doesn't appeal to me."

Joel has notions about acquiring properties, and also developing some himself. In fact, he's working on one which he hopes might get into production as a movie for TV.

"I'd play a rabbi," he explained. "Quite a jump from the Hitler M.C. (in Cabaret)."

With Lisa

There's also a strong possibility he'll team up for a Las Vegas engagement with Lisa Minnelli, his co-star in the Cabaret film, at the Riviera Hotel.

"I'm seriously thinking about that offer," Joel revealed.

Everything is meant to keep from creating the single image of the small song-and-dance man. He even played a mafia killer in a TV movie Man on a String, this past season, and a warlock in a Night Gallery episode. Why the heavies?

"I felt I needed to be out of make-up. It gets people in the television business thinking about you. I did it very much for my agents.

Joel Grey

Bunker Creator Ignors Controversy

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — All in the Family, CBS's smash comedy hit, starts its second full television season next September, far and away the most popular series ever to be on American TV and, still, the most controversial.

Norman Lear, the gentle-voiced father and midwife of the series whose persistence and intransigience got the Bunker family into the channels, is still spending almost as much time today defending the series as he was when it hit like a bombshell.

The series, since it began as a mid-season replacement during the 1970-71 season, has collected a shelf full of awards — six Emmys this season, alone, including one for "outstanding series-comedy" and one each for three of the four leads.

All in the Family topped almost every Nielsen list this season, usually with a weekly audience estimated at 50 million viewers and sometimes shooting up to 60 million. That is the television stratosphere inhabited only by the Oscar awards, Bob Hope's Christmas Special and the Super Bowl — new territory indeed for a half-hour situation comedy.

Lear has the satisfied air of a man whose big hunch became reality. The genesis of All in the Family, as is well known, was in a hit British series, Till Death Do Us Part, aired about seven years ago on the BBC.

Bought Rights

The Bunkers were, in the original British version, Alf and Else Garnett, two tight Cockney islands of prejudice and intolerance. Impressed, Lear bought rights to the show and then went to work transforming Alf into Archie, a Queens County, row-house, blue-collar bigot.

Else became Edith, naive, vague and generous and with an occasional flash of insight that clears the air. In the transformation, Lear deliberately created a pair of appealing, almost pathetic characters, and very funny ones.

"I've enjoyed it all so much," Lear said. "I have absolutely nothing to be sorry for. And I've got the best ensemble of players in the world. . . ."

Even the controversy does not bother him much: by now the familiar attacks on the show have become stereotyped. While the overwhelming numbers of viewers in all age, economic and social brackets love the show, it has its critics.

Crux of the criticism, as strong as the paeans, is that Lear and company have created a sympathetic monster in Archie, a middle-aged Malaprop with a vocabulary of abuse for just about every minority-ethnic, religious and sexual — around.

Some of the leaders of ganizations and cultural socie- assorted anti-defamation orties find Archie's bigotry and language offensive even in the Bunker contest.

Some maintain that, because the program is seen early Saturday evening, small children are learning to call names. Others find the constant wrangling in the Bunker family abrasive rather than funny. But the pro-Bunkers far outnumber the antis.

Before All in the Family took off, Lear had been a successful creator and producer of TV specials with his partner, Bud Yorkin. Their company, Tandem Productions, handled the original Andy Williams Show.

This past season, Yorkin has been in charge of launching another British adaptation, Sanford and Son for NBC.

Carson Still King Of the Talk Shows

Johnny Carson

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

—ABC-TV recently told owners of its affiliated stations that Dick Cavett has 90 days to improve his ratings, or he will be replaced by a new format.

—Effective in July, Group W productions says it will stop producing The David Frost Show.

Amid such changes, and sitting with what Mark Twain once called "The calm confidence of a christian holding four aces," sits Johnny Carson and the Tonight Show. He is the most highly paid, draws the biggest audiences and has the best contract of all the conversationalists. As he approaches the end of his tenth year on late-night television. Carson is king of the talk shows.

Overlooked

Carson tends to be overlooked. For the past two years, nearly every national magazine has devoted barrels of ink and tons of paper to Dick Cavett and his low-key style of talk. He is favored by the young viewer, loved by the better educated and acclaimed for his erudite wit. His audience always gets bigger during the summer months, when high school and college students are on vacation, and his ratings decline miserably during the autumn and the winter.

When Carson took his show to Burbank, Calif., on May 1, speculation centred on his need for greater appeal with Hollywood names to fight the CBS-TV movies. This is partly true, although the Tonight Show has been doing quite well in competition with feature films.

He moved west, says Carson, because "The talent pool is out here." He has found that his Monday-through Friday format makes it "a little sticky to find the large number of lively people in New York."

The income produced by the Tonight Show for NBC is anything but routine. In "Television, the Business Behind the Box" (Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich), Lester L. Brown writes that the program brings "between 10 and 15 million dollars a year in net income" to NBC.

$1.25M Salary

Brown puts Carson's salary at "close to 1.25 million dollars a year, along with other perquisites"—which, in New York, included a limousine to carry him from his United Nations Plaza Apartment to NBC studios at 30 Rockefeller Plaza.

The story has been told too many times about Johnny's break into show business at the age of 14 with a magic act. He played "The Great Carson!" and never recovered from the applause.

His senior thesis at the university of Nebraska was on tape. He examined the comedic technique of radio comedians, concentrating mainly on Jack Benny, and decided the only definition of humor comes from George Burns. "If you laugh," said Burns, "it's funny."

He quit a good job on an Omaha TV station to try his luck in the West. He took his wife and young son Chris and went to Los Angeles. He landed a job as a staff announcer at KNXT, developed a program called Carson's Corner, and failed to become an overnight discovery when he appeared on All Star Revue.

Saved Show

He was a writer for Red Skelton when Red went through a breakaway door that didn't break away. Red was hospitalized and, in those days of live TV, Carson had to substitute. This time he was discovered.

He landed a CBS-TV quiz show and subbed for Jack Paar on The Morning Show. He got a prime time, Thursday night, comedy series on CBS-TV, but it lasted only nine months. A similar daytime series had an even briefer run, five months.

He turned up next on a quiz show called Who Do Your Trust and after five years of this he was called to save the Tonight Show. It was in trouble. Jack Paar had quit and the network had learned, before hiring Paar, that such ideas as "America after dark" just didn't work.

Carson improved on Paar's performance. More stations were added and profits went up. He did cause a few problems — nothing really serious —but he was able to boost his income and to demand— and get—a total of 11 weeks of vacation each year.

Still, he kept working and quite possibly had logged more time in front of a television camera than any person. Looking back over the long run, Carson once said:

Lucy Back With Few Changes

By RICHARD K. SHULL

HOLLYWOOD— Lucille Ball had a backyard love fest, and that's progress.

There have been times when her little dinner parties under the tents have developed a brittle edge, with Lucy and family uptight that some callous member of the press would pop an indelicate question which could shatter the image of family togetherness and tranquility.

For instance, there was the time Lucy had her dinner party the night after son Desi had escorted Patty Duke to the Emmy awards. That was the time Patty flew three orbits around the room in accepting her trophy. Remember? Lucy was on edge that night.

Then there was the rather clumsy time when Patty had had a baby and young Desi wasn't denying those who looked askance toward him. Lucy also was a bit clutched up over that one.

But, this time, 19-year-old Desi was safely away in Tokyo working on a film, Marco Polo, and safely engaged to Liza Minnelli, who has Lucy's blessing. So, aside from a broken leg, Lucy was relatively free of problems.

The only blip on the happy scene came when someone asked young Lucie how she felt about Desi's engagement to Liza.

"Listen," she retorted, "he could have done a lot worse than he did and he did." It was an arch reference to the Patty Duke affair.

Lucy jumped up and added, "I've always told my kids to speak up and I've never regretted it until now." It was said in jest, sort of.

For the dinner party, Lucy's backyard was decorated with ski posters from Aspen and Snowmass, Colo., the site of her minor disaster last Jan. 6 when she broke both bones in her leg. The resultant leg cast had to be written into the first eight shows for the fall season. She now hops around with a leg brace and a cane.

As Lucy explained it, she and her family, and Liza, were standing up at the top of a 12,000-foot icy slope listening to a ski instructor when her skis decided to take off down the icy run.

"There I was in winter wonderland, and then right into M-A-S-H," she snorted. "They have a little hospital there at Snowmass where they handle 42 basket cases a day. They shovel cement all day long for the plaster casts."

She added the hospital is manned by doctors who all are ski buffs. "They don't make their rounds until after the lifts close at 4:30 p.m.," she said.

Aside from writing her show to compensate for her broken leg, Lucy said she'll be doing next fall exactly what she's been doing on TV since 1951 — playing Lucy.

"I'm not doing a thing different now than 20 years ago," she said. "I have three generations of Lucy watchers out there who expect certain things from me."

And while she was at it, she raised some polite hell about TV's new trend of permissive comedy which has been triggered by the success of All in the Family.

"Kids use words to get attention. They see a TV show where somebody uses a bad word and everyone is shocked or laughs at it, they know if they use that bad word, they'll get attention.

Wallace Jr. Subs for Dad

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Country and western stars Tammy Wynette and Del Reeves joined George Wallace Jr. in stumping for his wounded father Sunday before a crowd of 10,000 at Wallace's Woodstock.

The 21-year-old son of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace did not sign as had been advertised. But Reeves, Miss Wynette and other country stars such as George Jones and Ferlin Husky kept the music and "vote-for-Wallace" message flowing to the $5-a-head crowd at the Old Plantation Music Park.

Young Wallace, who has recorded one country and western song, Missing You, said that after his father was shot while campaigning at a Laurel, Md., shopping centre last month, he decided "not to sing until my father is up and around again."

Woodstock was the first of the large rock festivals catering to young music fans. It was held on a large farm in northern New York state, three years ago and attracted hundreds of thousands of fans who camped out during the three-day event..

"I got the idea from television," Smith said. "If the liberals can do it, we can, too."

Bonanza Co-Star Returns This Fall

By VERNON SCOTT

"I left Bonanza two years ago last February. At that time I thought the character I played, Candy, was a dead end. There was no place to go with him."

There weren't a great deal of places to go without him either. NBC made a pilot involving attorneys to star Canary but it didn't sell. Thereafter David appeared on stage, in stock and little theatre.

Before heading for his home in Hollywood the actor was directing and appearing in I Do, I Do in Canal Fulton, Ohio.

The chasm between network prime television exposure and a Canal Fulton production is best illustrated by Canary's doubling as set decorator, scenery painter and stagehand.

"Naturally, I feel gratified about returning to Bonanza, but like everyone else, I'm terribly unhappy about the circumstances. I talked to Mike Landon (who plays Little Joe) and he was encouraging about the possibility of my writing some scripts and maybe directing some episodes."

Canary has had no direct communication with executive producer David Dortort. Instead, he said, it was Lorne Greene and Mike who proposed that he return to television's Ponderosa.

"Mike really cares and worries about the scripts," Canary said. "He's written many of them and directed some segments, too."

In preparing viewers for Canary's return, Bonanza has featured him in reruns of the Sunday night show since Blocker's death last month of a blood clot on his lung.

Much depends, Canary added, on whether the show survives its first 13 weeks when it returns to the air.

"Speaking as a professional actor, I think any series can survive without a particular actor or character if the show is strong enough.

"Look at the old Andy Griffith Show. It survived even without him," he said. Canary said, however, "there will never be another Blocker. His impact was terrific.

"Wherever I go people ask me about Dan, even though I hadn't seen him since I left the show. He was a complicated guy, one of the best I've met in this business."

Canary was silent for a moment before adding, "but now it's get to work and do our best for the series."

CBC-FM's Organists in Recital will present two programs by English organist Harrison Oxley on June 21 and 28 at 6:30 p.m. The programs were recorded by CBC Radio during his recent appearance in Toronto at St. James' Cathedral.
